International Situation.

Chinese officials warned foreign shipping to keep clear of the China coast between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m. today, indicating a government plan to send air bombers to blast the Japanese naval blockade.

Britain and France abandoned diplo-

Mediterranean "piracy" patrol.

aid of the United States in inter-

Shanghai (Friday), Sept. 17.— China warned foreign shipping today to stay outside the 12th meridian, off the China coast, between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., indicating the government was preparing to send a fleet of war planes to attempt to break the Japanese blockade.

The Chinese warning was given in official notices to the embassies.
Roughly, the region mentioned extends across waters between the coast and where pilot ships are anchored in the vicinity of this city.

Naval Chiefs to Confer.

In the midst of this tense situation, reliable sources said there would be a conference later today about the U. S. flagship Augusta stationed here by the United States and three other powers. It was said
Admiral Harry E. Yarnall and Sir Charles Little, commanders of the American and British naval units, would attend, and there was a possibility representatives of the Italian and Netherlands fleets also would be present.

Presumably the naval commanders were prepared to discuss the protest which the four powers sent to Chinese and Japanese, urging gunfire and aerial bombs be diverted from the International Settlement.

Chinese Retreat in North.

In North China thousands of Chinese troops were reported retreating on all Hoppel fronts before the most determined Japanese offensive of the undeclared war.

At the headquarters of Lieut.
Gen. Count Juchitai Teruchi, Japanese commander in North China, it was said the Chinese were falling back toward their northern military headquarters at Paotingfu, 90 miles west of Peiping.

In the Shanghai area Chinese displayed a battle-scarred Rising sun flag—supposedly captured from the Japanese.

Borah Urges U.S. to Guard Constitution

Avoids Mention of Court Plan, Assails Nazism in Radio Address.

Defends 'Sacred' Trust; Speculation Grows on Roosevelt Speech.

Text of Senator Borah's Address
Page 4.

By Franklin Waltman.

Opening 24 hours of oratory in celebration of the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution, Senator William E. Borah last night called on the country never to surrender or compromise on the principle embodied in that document and to keep unimpaired the independence of the judiciary.

The Senate's premier orator, a leader in the fight for the preservation of the Supreme Court from the President's reorganization scheme, opened the celebration of the Con-stitution's birthday today at a meeting held under the auspices of the Masonic Order of Washington. His address was broadcast over the Nation by the National Broadcasting Co.

The Leonine Idahoan, in his best oratorical manner, assailed dictators abroad and those who would curb individual liberty at home. He laid down a thinly-veiled but scorching attack on the Nazi regime and those in this country who would undertake to spread the Hitlerian doctrines.

Shares With Bloom.

Borah shared the program in Constitution Hall before an audience of more than 1,000 with Sol Bloom, chairman of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission. The Borah speech was carried to meetings of Masons gathered throughout the country. The audience here enthusiastically applauded his praise of the Supreme Court.

Their speeches inaugurated a Nation-wide program of observance of the Constitution which will reach its climax tonight when President Roosevelt, speaking to a mammoth meeting in Sylvan Theater behind the White House, addresses the Nation in his first utterance regarding the Constitution—and presumably the Supreme Court—since his judicial reorganization scheme was defeated.

What Mr. Roosevelt will say has whetted the curiosity of the political world as has no other speech he ever has made. In that address he may indicate he will go on with his Supreme Court reorganization fight—or he may indicate he has abandoned that battle. Whatever he says will be pregnant in significance and implications.

Thus this 150th observance of the adoption of the Constitution is far more than the patriotic celebration it was expected to be a year ago.
Coming after eight months of grinding, terrible warfare on Capitol Hill over the judiciary reorganization scheme, after a shift in the viewpoint of the Supreme Court on Constitutional questions and after the now apparently ill-fated appointment of Hugo L. Black to that tribunal, this Constitution Day has become an important political event.

Not only will the President address the country today, but so will the leaders of the opposition to his Supreme Court plan. Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, will be the principal Constitution Day speaker at a meeting in Chicago's huge stadium. Significantly, he will be introduced by Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential candidate in last year's campaign.

Out in South Dakota's Black Hills, standing before the graven images of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, the President will speak.

Endeavour Lost As 105-Mi. Gale Broke Tow Line

Weight of 90-Foot Hawser
May Have Sunk Her in Mountainous Seas.

By The Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 16 (P).—Four Coast Guard cutters plowed the Atlantic off Nantucket tonight, seeking the British racing sloop Endeavour I, believed in danger after a gale parted the towline which joined her to the convoy yacht Viva.

The cutters Chelan and Cayuga sped away from the Coast Guard base here late last night, and headquarters officers today ordered the Harriet Lane and Tahoe to join the search.

The search began after Capt. Wallace Grint of the Viva put back into port at Newport, R. I., yesterday and reported the nine-inch hawser being used to tow the comparatively frail racing vessel had parted in a hurricane which reached an estimated intensity of 105 miles an hour.

Grint said he feared the weight of the hawser, 15 fathoms of which remained attached to the Endeavour's bow, might have forced her nose under water. He said the seas were running so high that the Viva's superstructure was damaged by waves.

Grint said he was not certain the Endeavour had weathered the first smashing waves of the storm, for "the seas were too heavy for the Endeavour to make any headway.
And we didn't see her after the towline parted because of the thick weather."

Wheeler Asks Black Klan Investigation

President Should Name
'Impartial Board,' He Declares.

Labor Editor Comes to Defense of 30-Hour
Week's Champion.

By Russell Smith

"The President should appoint an impartial board to investigate the charges that Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black holds life membership in the Ku Klux Klan," Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said last night, "or the Senate should do so."

"If the charges made are true, the President should ask for his resignation."

Wheeler's statement, made at Fargo, N. Dak., to the United Press, was the principal development in another day of controversy which bids fair to rival the debate aroused by the President's court reorganization proposals.

Catholic Attack.

Two blocs representing groups which were targets of the Klan in the days of its power entered the fight against Black yesterday, when the Baltimore Catholic Review, official organ of the Baltimore archdiocese, editorially denounced Senate procedure in Black's confirmation, and the Association for the Advancement of Colored People wired President Roosevelt a request that he ask for Black's resignation,
"especially in view of the silence of Senator Black on those widely publicized charges."

Almost simultaneously the first vigorous defense of Black by organized labor, always strongly in support of him, was voiced in Kansas City, the Associated Press said, by former Representative Edward Keating, of Washington, editor of Labor, journal of the railroad brotherhoods. Keating said he would not help "to crucify the man who fought my battle and your battle when we couldn't fight that battle ourselves."

Wheeler said:
"When the late Senator Robert
M. La Follette and I were candidates on the Progressive ticket for president and vice-president respectively in 1924, at a time when the Klan was at its height, we both denounced the Klan as being un-American."

"I have never changed my views.
It was conceived in religious bigotry and seeks to proscripe people from holding office contrary to the provisions of the Constitution of the United States."

"When charges were made upon the floor of the Senate that Senator Black was a member of the Klan,
I felt that he and his sponsors owed it to the Senate to deny the charges if they could. It was not done either before or after the vote was taken. It was for that reason I withheld my vote for the confirmation of Black."

"This is a good illustration of what happens when an Administration acts hastily and what happens when Senators vote blindly for every suggestion that is made by the White House."

The Catholic Review editorial, signed by Vincent de Paul Fitzpatrick, managing editor, charged Alabama priests were asked to indorse Black's appointment and refused.

Cites Lack of Defense.

"If there is no doubt about Mr.
Black's suitability why does not the Attorney General come to his defense and refute the allegations made against him?" The Review asked.

"If Mr. Roosevelt intimates the revelation or accusation have come as a surprise to him, why did not the President—and for Senator Black and ask about the rumors concerning his Klan membership before he appointed him?"

Mrs. Guggenheim Has Gone to Reno

New York, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Col.
Robert Guggenheim, one of the heirs to a $200,000,000 fortune, and his third wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Eaton Guggenheim, have separated and she is in Reno, it was learned today.
The sportsman, who once startled Washington by appearing at a diplomatic function in a bright-green dinner jacket, settled $1,000,000 on each of his first two wives, but was reported to have offered the present
Mrs. Guggenheim $2,000 a month.

Guggenheim, youngest son of the

Lindbergh Ready to Renounce
U.S. Citizenship, Aide Declares

Flier Intends to Become a British Subject, Professional Associate Says; Friends Recall Off-Expressed Desire to Avoid Limelight.

By The Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—A professional source associated with Col.
Charles A. Lindbergh said today the famous flier intends to renounce his American citizenship and become a British subject.

"The informant declined to permit use of his name, but his connection with Lindbergh is an established one."

The Lindberghs sailed for England nearly two years ago. Under English procedure it is necessary for a prospective subject to have resided in British territory for five years within the last eight years before application can be made. One of these five years must have been spent continuously in the part of the British Isles where the applicant is to become a subject.

The only comment on the citizenship report from those personally closest to the Lindberghs came from his attorney, Col. Henry Breckinridge, who acted as the flier's spokesman at the time Charles Lindbergh, jr., was kidnapped and slain in 1932.
Breckinridge said:

"The only person who can confirm that is Col. Lindbergh himself. No one else has a right to speak for him that I know of."

In Detroit Lindbergh's mother, Mrs. Evangeline Booth Lindbergh, refused to see or speak to anyone.
Other members of the household expressed ignorance of the matter.

2 Officials Quit D.C. Official Likely to Be In Row on Tax Inquiry Method Housing Chief

Chief Revenue Counsel and Aide Object to Giving Publicity to Names.

By William V. Nestly.

Morrison Shafroth, chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, has been forced out of that position because of his disapproval of methods followed in the Administration's recent investigation of tax evasion and avoidance, it was revealed yesterday.

Shafroth's resignation, along with that of his assistant, Russell J. Ryan, who shares Shafroth's views on the tax inquiry, was submitted late in June but never made public. Both men are leaving the Government service tomorrow.

Shafroth confirmed reports of the resignations in a brief statement saying:

"Assistant Chief Counsel Russell
J. Ryan and I were unable to convince ourselves it was proper to use the Bureau of Internal Revenue as planned in the tax avoidance and evasion investigation."

Objected to Giving Names.

"Being given the choice of participating in the presentation of the names or resigning, we tendered our resignation on June 28."

Neither he nor Ryan would discuss the situation further, but from circles close to them it was learned they considered it unfair to use the names of prominent and wealthy taxpayers in the publicity that accompanied sessions of the tax hearing. Court action, it was said, was considered by them to be the correct procedure.

Mrs. Roosevelt Reported
Backing John Ilder, ADA Administrator.

By Sidney Olson.

John Ilder, administrator of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, last night emerged as the "dark horse" in the tightening Cabinet battle for the five-year $10,000 a year post as administrator of the newly created United States Housing Authority.

Ilder, who has made no move to obtain the job, is being backed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, it is understood.

Ilder's chances are increased by the fact that both Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., have been pushing a personal candidate for the post. Yet Ilder would be acceptable to either side, it was indicated yesterday.

Nathan Straus, New York merchant, has been sponsored quietly for the post by Secretary Morgenthau (Democrat), New York, author of the bill creating the Authority, and Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York.

More vociferously, Langdon Post, of the American Federation of Housing Authorities, a particular foe of Ickes, has sought to get Straus appointed to the job.

Ickes, who has had the inside track, since the U. S. H. A. will come under his department, has plugged steadily for the candidacy of Howard A. Gray, administrator of his own FWA housing division.

It was learned that Ickes argued at the White House Wednesday, in an hour's chat with the President,

BULLETIN.

New York (Friday), Sept. 17 (P).
In New York's Democratic primary for mayor, 2,250 election districts out of 3,797, gave:

Copeland, 118,697; Mahoney, 208,

In the Republican primary, 2,325 election districts out of 3,797, gave:
Copeland, 26,999; LaGuardia, 46,925.

By The Associated Press.

New York (Friday) Sept. 17.—A great outpouring of votes in the popular boroughs surrounding Manhattan gave pro-New Deal Jeremiah T. Mahoney a heavy lead early today over Tammany-backed Royal S. Copeland in New York's Democratic mayoralty primary.

The boroughs of Brooklyn, the Bronx, Queens and Richmond—all led by Democratic chieftains friendly to James A. Farley and President Roosevelt—were going three to one for Mahoney in the primary returns, while Manhattan, Tammany's ancient home, was turning out in the ratio of about five to one for Copeland.

Early today the city-wide total —partial returns from 875 out of 3,797 election districts—a composite of Manhattan and all the other boroughs—gave Mahoney 86,894 and Copeland 51,880. Democrats wrote in the name of Mayor Fiorello La-Guardia (Republican) on 11,135 ballots.

LaGuardia in Front.

In the Republican primary La-Guardia also was leading Copeland, who sought both Democratic and Republican mayoralty nominations.
When returns had been received from 800 election districts, La-Guardia had 20,137 votes and Copeland 10,348.

The lead switched back to Mahoney after going first to him and then momentarily to Copeland.
At 11:20 o'clock last night, Mahoney issued a statement in which he declared Copeland was irre-trievably beaten and added, "This is a victory for Franklin D. Roosevelt."

As the vote-counting went forward unusually slow in 3,797 election districts—the task made more laborious by the fact the paper ballot, rather than the usual machine voting system, was used—there had been no official estimate of the total number of ballots cast. Political observers generally had predicted about 1,000,000.

Seven hours of unusually light balloting ended at 9 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Biggers, Glass Magnate, Accepts Appointment as Idle Census Administrator

Postal Survey Is Favored by Directing Head

Spurns President's Offer of $10,000 Salary, Urges Economy.

Pleasant-spoken, handsome and extremely wealthy, John D. Biggers, of Toledo, Ohio, yesterday accepted President Roosevelt's appointment as administrator of the forthcoming census of the unemployed but immediately found himself in disagreement with the Chief Executive.

Biggers wanted to serve without pay; the President thought he should accept a salary of $10,000 a year.

"I think he will humor me," said the president of the Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co., though conceding he might have to "compromise" on a dollar a year.

Leaving the White House, Biggers declined to discuss details of the census until he has conferred further with a committee composed of the secretaries of Commerce and Labor, the Works Progress Administration, chairman of the Social Security Board, director of the Census Bureau and head of the Central Statistical Bureau.

He did indicate, however, that he leans toward letting the Postoffice Department do the actual work of receiving the voluntary registration of the Nation's jobless, though some other method or a combination of methods may be decided on. Use of election machinery in the registration also has been considered.

The postal office, he said, has given assurance that it can distribute blanks to every household in the country. The blanks would be so simple that the average man can fill one out alone and return it by mail. Others could get help at their postoffices in answering the questions, he said.

Results of the registration would be checked in a number of localities in several ways, he said, by door-to-door canvass, perhaps, by WPA workers or through private agencies, to give an idea of the degree of accuracy attained in the registration.

Plans Permanent System.

Biggers hopes to develop a permanent scheme by which the data can be kept up-to-date, providing a running inventory of unemployment, somewhat like the British system. The registration would be on an "incentive" rather than a "penalty" basis, he said, when asked whether relief would be cut off from those who did not register.

The census, he held, can be made extremely valuable in reaching a solution of the unemployment problem. A sense of duty and realization of the vital need for re-employment prompted him to accept the appointment. He said he had been directly to the President and has been assured of adequate authority, he told reporters.

He praised the preliminary work of the experts who have been preparing data in advance of the appointment of the administrator.

Believes in Economy.

Of youthful appearance, despite the gray beginning to appear in his hair, with smooth, rather ruddy face and a quick smile, the administrator said he based his desire to work without pay on the fact that he was working for the unemployed. Since the cost of the census, estimate up to $5,000,000, will be paid out of relief money, he said the work should be done as economically as possible without sacrificing accuracy or thoroughness.

"My idea," he said, "is to get the information as promptly, as exactly and as economically as possible."

He hopes to have the registration completed by December 1. He will have offices, probably, in the Commerce Building.

Farm Conferees Homeward Bound After D. C. Talks

Most of the 120 State committee men invited here to talk over the 1938 farm program were homeward-bound last night to explain details to farmers in the 48 States.

AAA leaders reported there had been general approval of the attempt to tighten crop control on cotton, tobacco, corn, potatoes, peanuts and rice by special acreage limits next year.

Secretary Wallace will lead a group of AAA officials to Memphis October 1 for a general discussion of the new program and its relation to the South.

Flag Heils Topple Reich Grandstand

Cologne, Germany, Sept. 16 (AP)—The repeated mass rising of 5,000 spectators to salute flags at a military parade, toppled a temporary grandstand today at Euskirchen, near here, injuring many.

Four Accused Here After Lottery Raids

Two colored men and two women were charged with violating the lottery law after two raids yesterday.

As Patients Moved to New Sanatorium

225 Tubercular Patients Moved To Glenn Dale

Transfer to New Hospital Is Accomplished With No Ill Effects.

Upshur Street Hospital, for years the District's chief tuberculosis center, yesterday became a memory as its 225 patients were transferred to the new sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md.

The mass migration, probably the greatest of its kind in Capital history, took less than seven hours. All negotiated the approximately 15 miles successfully, including 55 seriously ill patients transported in stretchers in Army ambulances.

Peabody Pleased.

Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, head of the old tuberculosis hospital and now superintendent of the combined adults and children's sanatorium at Glenn Dale, was jubilant over the transfer, its swiftness and apparent lack of injurious effects upon the principals.

The move, at first, was expected to take at least two days. But with the ambulances, the Glenn Dale rescue squad, car and four special buses at the hospital's disposal, the last patient was on his way to the sanatorium at 2 p. m. The transfer began at 8 a. m.

Nurses Go Along.

Dr. Peabody, assisted by half his staff, supervised the loading. On the receiving end were the other half of the staff. One nurse accompanied each of the groups of four serious cases who made the trip by ambulance.

Moving of equipment and supplies—X-ray apparatus, sterilizers, instruments, tables, beds, etc.—also was started yesterday. This work may be completed tonight, or tomorrow at latest.

The "charter" population of the new sanatorium, dedicated Wednesday, is divided almost equally between white and colored patients. All had been assigned to wards and rooms long before their arrival, so that there was no delay when they reached Glenn Dale.

Sugar Is Dumped To Avoid New Tax

By the Associated Press.

Farm Administration officials said yesterday there was a rush of sugar into consumption channels during August—just ahead of the new sugar act's half-cent processing tax.

Refiners, beet factories, and importers delivered 640,019 tons during August, compared with 464,865 tons in the same month last year, the AAA sugar section reported.

Deliveries by refiners amounted to 465,066 tons compared with 309,670 tons in August, 1936, and 383,703 tons in August, 1935.

Beet factories delivered 117,930 tons as against 90,335 a year ago and 65,676 two seasons ago. Importers supplied 59,033 tons in August this year, 64,880 last year, and 61,459 two seasons ago.

Big Depositors New Charges Hint Fidelity Filed Against Plan Rejection Radio Lawyers

Sullivan Indicates Many Seek Some Cash; New Proposal Ready.

Possibility that the reorganization plan of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association would not succeed was indicated yesterday in the statement of George Sullivan, chairman of the shareholders' committee, that he was opposed to it.

Sullivan said he was one of the larger shareholders, with $20,000 impounded in the closed institution. He said some of the other large shareholders such as former Senator Clarence C. Dill, also a committee member, were opposed to the plan.

A secret report on the progress of a referendum of shareholders was issued Tuesday by the Treasury. Copies were in the hands of Sullivan, Receiver James A. Nolan, and a few others. None of those who received the confidential report would disclose its contents.

Plan Unsuccessful.

Sullivan and Dill said they were "sitting quiet" during the referendum, and were not publicly opposing or approving the plan, taking the viewpoint that if 75 per cent of the shareholders are willing to accept 85 cents on the dollar in the form of new shares in The First Federal Building & Loan Association of Washington, they would do likewise.

"However," said Sullivan, "speaking not as chairman of the committee, but merely as a large depositor, the plan as set forth is unsatisfactory. I have polled large numbers of shareholders long before the referendum and they are all asking for some cash. The present plan allows for no cash payoff."

Fidelity has $1,600,000 in the Second National Bank which is available for distribution, but which the board of the proposed Federal Building & Loan does not wish paid out.

"Want Some Cash."

"From my contact with shareholders, and I have worked ceaselessly on Fidelity for over a year," Sullivan declared, "I know that most of them would like to get some cash. The money is there. A dividend could have been paid."

"If the shareholders could merely get a part of their money, they would be more willing to come in on the reorganization plan. The Treasury wanted a cash dividend paid out right away. So did the Federal Home Loan Bank. But the board of directors in its recent letter to the shareholders stood fast on the point that there would be no immediate payoff."

Receiver Nolan said yesterday that shareholders had been filing answers to his ballot at an increasing rate, and that a considerable number had come in. The time limit for voting was set at September 24.

Third Plan Ready.

If the latest reorganization plan failed, it does not mean that efforts to reopen the bank will end, Dill said. A third plan is already in the making which would include among other things the placement of a number of shareholders on the board of directors. The board of the proposed First Federal has two small depositors on it, but no substantial representation, in numbers or in amount, is seated.

"The F. H. L. B. is determined to reopen that bank," Dill said, "in either the form now proposed or in some other form. I have been reassured as to that."

Wildcat Strikes Move on Foot Are Outlawed To Name 'Czar' By Auto Union Of Wall Street

Martin Sanctions Discharge for Men 'Sitting Down' Without C.I.O. Order

By the United Press.

Detroit, Sept. 16.—"Wildcat" sit-down strikes were outlawed by the United Automobile Workers Union tonight in a letter to William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corp.

The letter, signed by Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers executive committee, recognized the corporation's right to discharge employees responsible for strikes called without approval of the union's international officers.

Knudsen indicated tentatively tonight that the promise to outlaw "wildcat" strikes would break a deadlock between company and union conferees.

Martin's action was taken with approval of the United Automobile Workers executive committee. It amounted to a capitulation to General Motors' demand that discussion of proposed revisions in the union's collective bargaining contract wait until the United Automobile Workers guaranteed an end of wildcat strikes.

The letter opened the way for negotiations the union's demand for a 7-hour day and 35-hour week, sole collective bargaining rights in all G. M. plants in the United States and Canada and other amendments to the union's contract.

Wildcat Strikes Move on Foot Are Outlawed To Name 'Czar' By Auto Union Of Wall Street

Martin Sanctions Discharge for Men 'Sitting Down' Without C.I.O. Order

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—The World-Telegram today said it learned from well-informed sources a "very definite" movement is on foot in Wall Street to select an outstanding man as "czar" over the New York Stock Exchange.

Those behind the movement, the newspaper said, are looking for a man of "high repute, who would command the respect of the Administration in Washington and who is fully familiar with general business and industry, as well as the stock market."

Sponsors of the project, it was said, felt it might lead to an increase of public confidence in the market.

The story added that those associated with the plan pointed no criticism at Charles R. Gay, president of the institution, but felt his administration had been handicapped by the fact of his membership in the exchange.

Spokesmen for the stock exchange said they were unaware of any movement to supplant Gay with an outsider.

The report followed renewal of a controversy between Gay and James M. Landis, who has just retired as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, concerning effects of present Securities and Exchange Commission regulation on the market.

In a final press conference on Tuesday Landis rejected claims made by Gay in his annual report that Securities and Exchange Commission rules made for markets which lacked liquidity and which operated to the detriment of investors.

Cushion for Prices.

Landis contended the odd-lot market could be depended upon now to provide a cushion for prices as an effective substitute for the covering of bear traders of former days.

To this and other observations by Landis, Gay retorted by reiterating the suggestion that the Securities and Exchange Commission undertake a fundamental study of the kind of a stock market that is best suited to the needs of the American public. He also said he stood by the statement made in his annual report that regulation, while producing some good results, also tended to place undue restraints on "normal proper action, thus creating abnormal market conditions."

U. S. Chiefs Check Corn Speculation

By the Associated Press.

Federal officials said yesterday they are keeping a close watch on speculative trading in corn, especially September futures.

Quotations under this contract jumped 5 cents a bushel today at Chicago, where margin requirements have been increased by exchange officials.

Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, chief of the Commodity Exchange Administration, which is charged with preventing price manipulations in farm products, said officials here are checking the "September corn situation directly and through exchange officials."

Missing D. C. Contractor Slain or Kidnaped, Wife Contends, Asking Inquiry

Poses Search Virginia Woods For Brinkley

Family Holds That All Clues Point to Case of Murder.

As posses scoured the woods yesterday after the mysterious disappearance of Arthur G. Brinkley, 47, Washington contractor, his family demanded a fuller investigation and asserted all the clues pointed to murder.

Poses headed by police combed the tangled bramble-covered country near Kirkwood road, in Arlington County, searching for the body of the contractor near the isolated spot where his car was found abandoned, his purse empty and glasses broken on the floor.

Arlington County police were skeptical, but made a search over several square miles. They considered suicide more likely than murder, but gave even greater credence to a theory Brinkley had disappeared of his own accord.

Wife Discredits Flight.

"We've got to keep this case open," his wife said last night at her new apartment at 5514 First street northwest. "I am positive Arthur was either killed or kidnaped. I've tried to get the Department of Justice to investigate, but they say it's out of their jurisdiction. Washington police won't enter the investigation."

Mrs. Brinkley said her husband's business was prospering and that he owed no large amounts of money and had no financial worries which would make him wish to vanish. The only other implication to be drawn from the police viewpoint, she said, was "They must mean he was running away from his wife. I'm sure that wasn't so. He was very happy and cheerful."

"It's just too ridiculous to think of his going away, going anywhere, without his glasses. He had only one pair. All his clothes are home. If he had decided to go away on a trip he would have gone in the car. He just wasn't the kind of man to believe that way. If he had wanted to go, he would have told us."

No Sign of Struggle.

Sheriff Howard B. Fields, of Arlington County, said there were no signs of a struggle around the car. Everything in the machine was in good order, he said.

Brinkley's purse, which was believed to contain $287, was empty and the back seat of the car. He had cashed a check at the Arlington Trust Co. at Rosslyn about 9:45 a. m. Wednesday. His car, parked a mile from a contracting job at Fifteenth and Uth streets, Arlington, was first seen at 10:30 by James B. Lockwood, who lives nearby. Lockwood noticed the car again at 11 and notified police.

Numerous persons knew he had the check and intended to cash it. It was considered likely he was seen with the money at the bank. Mrs. Brinkley reasoned some one at the bank saw him with the $287 and followed in another car, forced him into the deserted side road and robbed him.

She was at loss to explain where the body was. "That's the awful part of it for me," she said. "It's this suspense, not knowing whether he's dead or alive, or whether he needs help, that's killing me."

Arlington police said they were not looking for any murder suspects. They declared they were searching the woods for Brinkley's body, in case he had been shot. He had been seen at 11:30 by 36 hours.

Deputies interviewed business associates of the missing man.

One acquaintance said he had been moody lately, and had shown no interest in his work. It was said he had not talked to friends the last few days and preferred to remain to himself, silent and in thought.

Brinkley's five grown children, sons and daughters of an earlier marriage, corroborated their stepmother's statements. His first died. A married daughter, Mrs. Floyd Hines, 22, was hurrying here from Pittsburgh.

The case called to mind the mysterious disappearance of Charles F. Keene last spring. Mrs. Brinkley said. Keene's stateroom was discovered empty when the steamer District of Columbia docked at Norfolk. His broken glasses were found on the cabin floor. For some time it was thought he had voluntarily disappeared. Then his body was found in Chesapeake Bay.

Washington police declined to enter the case because of lack of jurisdiction, but did broadcast a lookout for Brinkley, giving his description. They pointed out that Brinkley lived three blocks from the home of Gustave Poppenberg, who was found a suicide in Montgomery County recently. Poppenberg drove to Great Falls in his car. His glasses were found on the floor of the machine. His body was found in a stolen Army truck 30 miles away.

Steamfitters Laborer Waits End Strike on For Hearing in Capitol Project Doctor's Death

Employment of Laborers to Handle Cooling Pipes Causes Walkout.

The 100 steamfitters and helpers who yesterday struck at the Capitol, paralyzing installation of the $4,000,000 air-conditioning system, will be back at work this morning, according to David Lynn, Capitol architect.

Meeting at the architect's office late yesterday, the representatives of the Steamfitters and Helpers Association, and the Mechanical Engineering & Construction Co. of Baltimore, the contractor, agreed the steamfitters would complete the work.

The steamfitters, who were at work on a tunnel water line, struck because nonsteamfitters were employed to handle pipe, it was said. Contract for the project, according to the architect's office, was let to the Baltimore firm, which employed the Columbia Foundation Co. of Washington as subcontractors to build the tunnel.

The agreement, Lynn said, specified that laborers were to handle the pipe when it was put in the tunnel, and the steamfitters and their helpers were to fit the pipe.

3 Brothers Arrested In $15,000 Pay Roll Holdup in Virginia

Gate City, Va., Sept. 16 (AP)—Sheriff J. E. Quillen, of Scott County, said three brothers, John, Harry and Zeke Cleek, were arrested today on a warrant charging them with the $15,000 mine pay roll robbery yesterday near Norton, Va.

John and Harry Cleek were arrested here while Zeke was taken at Kingsport, Tenn. Sheriff Quillen said all three denied the charge. The brother operate a fleet of taxicabs here.

Collegiate Bandit Pleads Not Guilty

Alfred H. Brauer, 22-year-old "brains" of a daring bandit gang, and three accomplices were lodged in the District Jail last night to await trial for several robberies.

Yesterday they were arraigned in Police Court on a charge of robbing a Sanitary Grocery Co. messenger of $300. Also accused of the $1,200 holdup of the S. & W. Cafeteria, the men pleaded not guilty and were ordered held under $10,000 bond each.

Police did not arraign the men on the $1,200 count. They said this case would be presented to the grand jury.

The other men who faced Police Court Judge Robert E. Mattingly were Harry Gordon Smith, 35, 1002 Eighth street northwest; William P. Allen, 30, 4004 Ninth street northwest and James G. Bristow, 29, 1432 Monroe street northwest.

Meanwhile, police released Brauer's 19-year-old wife, Dorothy Jane Brauer, who has been in custody since the night of the cafeteria robbery, August 31.

Police Reopen Two-Year-Old Loring Murder

New Clues Are Traced in Slaying of Bride-to-Be in Prince Georges.

The Corinna Loring murder mystery was revived yesterday when, for the first time in months, Capt. Joseph Itzel, of the Baltimore police department appeared in Upper Marlboro, Md., reportedly to trace down several new "leads," which may bring a solution of the nearly two-year-old case.

Capt. Itzel, who is in charge of the investigation into the murder of the Mount Rainier bride-to-be on November 4, 1935, conferred with Alan Bowie, Prince Georges County States attorney, and then left with Deputy Sheriff William Clifton on a secret mission.

The Baltimore detective's conference with the State's attorney at this time—approximately three weeks prior to the convening of the grand jury—was regarded as especially significant.

The case already has been reviewed by two preceding grand juries and it is generally believed that if it is presented to the investigating body at this next session an indictment will be sought.

After appearing before the grand jury last fall, Itzel announced that he had not been able to locate the body of the bride-to-be. He declared, however, that he did not consider the evidence strong enough to stand up in court and was waiting for a "break."

Apparently Itzel and Deputy Sheriff Clifton left Upper Marlboro to check on the new information he has obtained. The detective arrived yesterday morning. He had not returned to Baltimore at a late hour last night.

The Loring girl's body was found on Saddleback Ridge, a wooded sector not far from her home, on November 9, 1935, five days after she disappeared. She was to have married Richard Tear, St. Elizabeths Hospital attendant, two days after her disappearance.

Tear was arrested shortly after the finding of the girl's body, but was released after questioning.

Cookeville, Tenn., Sept. 16 (AP)—W. W. McDonald, about 65, a former grocer, was shot to death, and Chief of Police Harvey Quarles, 45, was stabbed in a fight between the two men on Main street here today.

Sheriff Sam D. Poiet said the chief had arrested McDonald at the county fair Saturday night on a charge of "public profanity" but later released him. At the time of the arrest, the sheriff said, McDonald threatened to "get even."

Bureau Tags Fish Like Autos To Trace Their Wanderings

The time is coming when seagoing fish will have no more privacy than the inmates of a goldfish bowl. So curious is the Bureau of Fisheries becoming about the life and habits of its finny charges that no self-respecting flounder will dare take a little pleasure jaunt south for the week-end for fear of being reported to Washington.

The whole thing began four years ago when the bureau opened its fish-lagging program. Begun as an experiment, the project has developed to a point where thousands of fish are tagged every year. Information gained from it is used to benefit the fish themselves, sports fishermen and commercial fishermen.

The bureau's division of inquiry regard food fish, headed by Elmer Higgins, maintains experimental stations on the Atlantic Coast from New England to Florida. From these points boats are sent out to catch fish whose private lives are to be observed.

The victim is taken from the water just long enough to have a nickel pin thrust under his back. Attached to the pin are two tags—a white one bearing a serial number and a red one labeled "Reward"—return to the Bureau of Fisheries, Washington, D. C.

The attachment of the tags causes the fish no particular discomfort. Higgins explains for the benefit of the S. P. C. A. "The wound heals almost immediately."

The flounder—or it may be a porgy or a hardhead—then is released. If some fisherman's bait is tempting enough to catch the fish, and if the fisherman is observant enough to see the tags, the chances are that the Bureau of Fisheries will have a report on the creature's wanderings within a few months.

The reward sent to the finder varies from 25 cents to $1, depending on what sort of fish he has caught. Sometimes the Government will get a batch of tags from some commercial fisherman who waives the reward, realizing the work is aiding his business. To facilitate the distribution of the bounties, the bureau has given certain fishermen in each port the authority to collect tags from their fellows and pay them their quarters and dollars on the spot.

Comparison of the fisherman's report as to where and when he caught the fish with the record of where and when it was released gives Higgins and his staff an idea of the route traveled by the species, what time of year it migrates and how fast it goes once it gets started.

In addition, the percentage of tags returned is an accurate index of how fast various fish are being removed from the sea. A study made on Chesapeake Bay four years ago showed that 34 per cent of the bay's striped bass were removed in one year. When a percentage as high as this is found, the bureau takes steps toward restocking the section and protecting what fish are left.

Last year, the inquiries division scored a triumph. Its men have been trying for ages to devise a tag for shrimp and other crustaceans which will not slip off when the creatures shed their shells. Finally it was discovered that a tag fastened to the first segment of a shrimp's body will stay in place for several months. It slips half its shell over its head and the other half over its tail, and the first segment comes right between the halves.

Wichita Drops Munitions Cargo as U. S. Formally Cuts Off Exports to Orient

Private Vessels Still May Take Arms to China

Ships Engaging in Trade Forfeit Protection of Government.

The United States Government formally withdrew yesterday from the business of exporting arms and munitions to either China or Japan, but left the field wide open to private munitions-makers and shippers.

This was the construction placed by State Department officials last night on the proclamation by Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, reaffirming the President's order of September 14 banning arms shipments to the Orient in Government-owned vessels.

The commission order had been anticipated by the Wichita, 385-ton freighter bound for Hongkong with a load of 19 airplanes, barbed wire and pistols for the Chinese government. The Wichita unloaded its war cargo yesterday at San Pedro Harbor, Calif., and prepared to steam to Manila with the remainder of its freight.

May Ship Cargo Privately. State Department officials held there is nothing to prevent properly licensed private arms shippers from picking up the Wichita's cargo and delivering it as long as they remember the President's warning they do so "at their own risk."

This warning, in effect, means this Government does not provide a conveyer for private ships thus engaged, but does not involve any country which might interfere with the shipment from United States claims for damages ensuing.

Kennedy's statement, carefully worded, said:

"Conforming with the statement of policy made by the President on September 14, the United States Maritime Commission yesterday issued an order prohibiting the transportation on Government-owned vessels from the United States, or its possessions, to China or Japan of arms, ammunition or implements of war, as listed in the President's proclamation of May 1, 1937.

"This order is being complied with by all Government-owned vessels, including the S. S. Wichita."

Wang Disappointed. Chinese Ambassador C. T. Wang expressed regret at the action of the Maritime Commission last night, after a call at the State Department. His position is understood to be that the order will benefit Japan at China's expense.

In apparent belief the immediate tensions of the Far East conflict has lessened materially, the President will return to Hyde Park Saturday, it was learned at the White House yesterday. He has not yet decided to make the projected Western trip.

The Associated Press reported from San Francisco that another compromise settlement of sailors' war bonus demands was averted yesterday after a tie-up of American shipping to and from the Orient had been threatened.

President Jefferson to Sail.

The American Mail liner President Jefferson prepared to sail from Seattle for the Far East after having been held up three days because of extra-compensation demands by crew members. British-governed Hongkong will be the only scheduled port to call in China, officials announced, and if the ship should be diverted to Shanghai or any other part of the war zone by State Department orders, the line would aid the men in seeking Government bonuses.

The States Steamship Line's vessel California remained stalled in Portland over similar demands. The company contends the ship will not be endangered by its North China destination.

The big Dollar liner President Hoover, which docked Wednesday night at San Francisco with the body of one crew member killed in the "mistake" bombing near Shanghai August 30 by Chinese planes, will sail west again September 23. Line officials would not predict action on war bonus demands.

In New York three steamers of the American Export Line, sailed for Mediterranean ports last night after reaching an agreement on war bonus demands whereby the Maritime Commission will settle the question.

Mussolini's Son Unhurt When Car Loses Wheel

Naples, Italy, Sept. 16 (AP).—Bruno Mussolini, Il Duce's younger son, escaped uninjured today when the wheel of his automobile flew off as he drove here to bid his brother Vittorio farewell on a trip to the United States.

Bruno abandoned his wrecked automobile and returned to Rome where he borrowed an airplane and flew here in ample time to see Vittorio off on the liner Rex with Hal Roach, his associate in a new Italian motion picture venture.

League Seeks Support of U. S. In China Crisis

Sino-Japanese Committee Revived; Mandate Asked in Spanish War.

Geneva, Sept. 16.—The League of Nations today sought support of the United States in its consideration of Japan's undeclared war on China.

The League Council gave its approval to the initiative of Great Britain and France in reviving the 23-power advisory committee on Sino-Japanese conflicts, which was created when Japan overran Manchuria in 1931. The United States has an observer's seat on this committee.

The Chinese League representative, Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, approved the measure to bring the United States back into League collaboration, but insisted the Council must remain responsible for action on China's appeal.

The revival of the Sino-Japanese advisory committee, which proved powerless to prevent Japan's seizure of Manchuria, was discussed in an executive meeting of the Council, and a few minutes later the members were plunged into a struggle with another undeclared war.

Premier Juan Negrin of loyalist Spain, denouncing Fascist Italy for the latter's aid to Generalissimo Franco's nationalists in the Spanish war, accused Italy of being the "anonymous nation" which has been torpedoing merchant shipping in the Mediterranean.

The Council then turned to the strife between Arabs and Jewish colonists in Palestine, a situation which several times has assumed the proportions of an undeclared civil war. The League authorized Great Britain to send a new royal commission to Palestine to work out the details of her partition plan whereby the Holy Land will be divided into sovereign Jewish and Arab states with a neutral British corridor under League mandate.

the Twenty-second Japanese Brigade—in support of their assertion they had recaptured the town of Lotien, between Shanghai and Liuh.

Japanese surrounded. Japanese denied they had lost the city, but a Chinese military spokesman told this story:

Chinese waited until Japanese artillery, tanks and cavalry attempted an eastward thrust out of Lotien. The Chinese executed a half-right turn and attacked the Japanese on the right and left flanks, at the same time engaging the center.

The Chinese, finding themselves on three sides of the Japanese forces, went over the top of the trenches and fought their way into Lotien. The Japanese were driven into a cluster around their regimental colors. There they started a desperate bayonet attack, trying to break through the encircling Chinese. Chinese soldiers drew their hand swords and met the bayonet attack.

The Chinese spokesman left the impression the Japanese defenders were annihilated in the hand-to-hand fighting.

Tokyo Cruiser Reported Sunk. Shanghai, Sept. 16 (AP).—Japanese advances in North China campaigns were outstanding developments today as conflict continued savagely over most of the 2,000-mile Chinese war front.

The Japanese reported they had plunged further into Shansi Province, bombed its capital, broken Chinese armies south of Peiping, threatened to smash China's Hopei defense line.

Japanese warships and planes continued to harry the South China coast, but the Chinese claimed—without independent confirmation—their air force had struck back with punishing effect, sinking one enemy cruiser and damaging other vessels. Japanese planes bombed Canton's airport.

Heavy rains slowed the Shanghai fighting. The Japanese heavy mechanized units were mired. But Japanese spokesmen said their forces there would undertake shortly major operations to drive the Chinese inland.

Cholera spread in and around Shanghai. In the International Settlement and French Concession alone there were 740 cases, an increase of more than 100 overnight. There were 1,400 suspected cases in the international areas, with thousands more in native districts outside, where health conditions were much worse. One British soldier has died of the disease; one American and three other foreigners have been stricken.

Ethics Code Considered For Music Publishers

By the Associated Press. Some of the secrets of how and why songs become popular may be disclosed here October 4.

The Federal Trade Commission invited representatives of the popular music publishing industry to a conference to try to write a code of ethics for themselves. "Commercial bribery and song plugging" were listed as probable topics of discussion.

Officials said one of the disputed practices in the industry is the payment of gratuities to orchestra leaders who introduce new songs.

Census Shows 21 to 24 Average Burglar Age

By the Associated Press.

Most prisoners who go to penitentiaries for burglary are between 21 and 24 years old and have little chance of escaping, the Census Bureau said today.

Reporting on its annual census of State and Federal prisons, the bureau said 67,150 persons were admitted to the institutions during 1936 and 67,150 were released. The census, which did not include Alabama, Georgia or Mississippi, said there were 144,180 prisoners in the institutions January 1.

Ex-Rep. Hull Leaves $5,500,000 to Son

Chicago, Sept. 16 (AP).—The will of Morton Denison Hull, former Republican Congressman from the Fifth Illinois District, leaving the bulk of an estimated $5,500,000 estate to his son, Denison Bingham Hull, was filed in probate court today. Hull died August 20 at his summer home at Bennington, Vt. He was 70.

The monkey house at the Zoo had more visitors this summer than the Lincoln Memorial, Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis in the Smithsonian, the Washington Monument or Gen. Robert E. Lee's home. In fact, it enjoyed a larger patronage than did the Senate and the House of Representatives. More tourists gaped at the antics of the apes than went out of their way to see the shrine of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

Total attendance at the Zoo during this year's tourist season was 608,300 persons, and the monkey house was the most popular attraction there. This figure exceeds attendance at the Lincoln Memorial by nearly 20,000 and is over three times as large as the number of visitors counted at the Lee home.

All this, of course, is not intended as a slur on the tourists; it's just a little statistical tribute to the management of the Zoo.

Applications will be accepted during October for the following civil service positions: Associate medical officer (general practice and special branches), engineer (various grades), associate dentist for the Veterans' Administration, United States Public Health Service and Indian Field Service.

Gleanings from this week's F. C. A. Employees' Bulletin:

Miss Helena B. Cook, R. G. Beers, Louis J. Pike and John M. McKnight, all of F. C. A., will appear in a radio skit, "The March of Farm Credit," on the National Garden hour, tomorrow at 1:10 p. m., Station WMAZ, 1200 W. Michigan.

R. C. Dorsey, of the Information and Extension Division, and Miss Gladys McCleery, of the Treasury Department, also are in the cast.

The 1937 field day will be held Tuesday at the New Annapolis Roads Club. Following sports events of practically every description, dinner will be served. There will be dancing from 8 to 11 p. m.

Miss Katharine Aldridge, a former employee of the F. C. A. of Baltimore, is rumored to be a candidate for the role of Scarlett O'Hara in the three-time picture version of "Gone With the Wind." She left the F. C. A. to become a model in New York and already has had a role in one movie, "Vogues of 1938."

New appointments in the Washington office: Lloyd Godley, of Stillwater, Okla., formerly field representative for the Production Credit Corporation of St. Louis, also in the production credit division; Roland A. Jack, of Telford, Pa., Federal credit union section; Ralph Russell, of Kensington, Md., in the economics section of the finance and research division.

For hikers and bikers: The Farm Credit Club will walk 7 miles in White Oak Canyon and nearby trails in Shenandoah National Park Sunday. Alfred J. Buschek, of the Social Security Board, is in charge of the group, which will leave Washington at 7 a. m. And there will be a bicycle trip to Alexandria the same day, led by Miss Helen J. Saari.

Missing from the circulating library: "Angels in Undress," by Mark Benny.

Officers of the Interior Department Recreation Association are very much pleased with the enthusiasm members feel for the association. The latest display of fervor is the purloining of a collection of photographs snapped during the L. D. B. A.'s first official function and recently displayed at the entrance to the cafeteria. Apparently someone had such a good time at the party that he wanted a keepsake for his memory book. Anyway, the pictures have disappeared and, while the officers may consider the whole thing a nice gesture, the publicity committee confesses it wouldn't mind having them back again.

For the benefit of Government workers and others, the Greenbelt Registration Office in the Barr Building will remain open until 6 o'clock tonight, passing the usual closing hour of 4:30 p. m.

The United Federal Workers of America, Local 29, Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, has chosen the following officers: William Parker, president; Mrs. Anne Miller, treasurer; Crawford Bishop, Jr., recording secretary; Miss Catherine Carmody, financial secretary; Miss Kathryn Goodwin and James Maxwell, organizers.

The local points with pride to Jacob Baker, president of U. F. W. A., and Isaac McBride, organizer for the union. Baker was formerly vice president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and McBride was the corporation's office manager.

If it's not one Civil War battle these days, it's another. This time it's the celebrated battle of Chickamauga, one of the bloodiest engagements of the war, which began September 18, 1863. A ceremony marking its seventy-fourth anniversary will be held Sunday at the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park in Tennessee. Gov. E. D. Rivers of Georgia will speak. The park itself was established in 1890.

The battle, fought for the possession of roads to Chattanooga, was won by the Confederates after nearly a third of both armies had fallen. They surrounded the Union forces in Chattanooga, but were driven away two months later in the battle of Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge.

First of the territorial series of stamps to be issued by the Postoffice Department is a 3-cent Hawaiian stamp, which will be placed on sale October 18 at the Honolulu postoffice. It will be purple in color. The central design is a reproduction of a statue of King Kamehameha I, who effected the unification of the islands. Collectors wishing first-day cancellations may send not more than ten addressed covers to the Honolulu postmaster. Remittance must be made in cash or by postal money order; postage stamps will not be accepted in payment, the Postoffice Department says firmly.

Bringing 'Em Back Alive Tests Dr. Mann's Patience on 'Ark'

Animals on High Seas Keep Captors Busy Catering to Finicky Appetites; Ship Due to Arrive at New York Sept. 25.

Dr. William Mann, head of the District Zoo, is having his hands full feeding 2,000 wild animals on board his ark, due in New York from Sumatra Saturday, September 25, according to advices received yesterday.

"Bringing 'em back alive" is more difficult than catching 'em, the head of the National Geographic Society-Smithsonian Institution expedition reported. The animals are on board the S. S. Silverash, and it takes the combined efforts of five men and one woman (Mrs. Mann) to care for them.

At Singapore, before starting home by way of the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean, the ship took on thousands of pounds of foodstuffs ranging from frozen fish to honey. As the animals devoured the mountains of food, more had to be bought along the way.

Hay imported from the Western World is fed to Asiatic species of deer, sheep, cattle and pigs. East Indies hay is of poor quality, and the guests on the ark demand the best.

Frozen fish is used to tempt alligators which have to be fooled into eating them. Asiatic 'gators eat only live fish, so the frozen ones are dangled in front of their snouts on a willow stick. After a while the 'gators snap at them and eat them, none the wiser.

Eggs for snakes is a big item. The snakes eat uncooked eggs, with the shells on, and after a meal the reptiles look like ropes with knots their full length. Some of the tropical snakes are in a coma, chilled by the "cold" of the Mediterranean.

The fruit course, served to all the birds, includes scores of crates of oranges and apples and melons, but bananas are the staple fruit for all, especially the monkeys, who hastily stuff their cheeks with double portions to be chewed reflectively long after the lunch-hour scramble is over. The monkeys enjoy onions with their bananas.

Birds of paradise dine on distinctly earthly bread crumbs and greens; the hornbill likes to catch insects to for him balls of meat and tossed in the air which he snatches; lizards have been switched from bugs to hamburger.

A.F.G.E. Heads Are Re-elected Unanimously

Stengle Acclaimed, Woman Weeps; Chicago Chosen for 1938 Meeting.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Sept. 16.—President Charles I. Stengle and all national officers of the American Federation of Government Employees were re-elected unanimously—and in the case of Stengle, dramatically—at the closing session of the sixth annual convention here today. The terms are for two years.

Stengle stood on the sidelines as John B. Murray, of Boston, placed him in nomination. The delegates whooped an acclamation and a representative of every lodge rose and seconded. Resuming the platform Stengle was so full of emotion he could hardly talk. A feminine delegate from Washington wept.

A similar ovation came to Bernice B. Hefner, of Washington, re-elected secretary. The national treasurer, Cecil E. Custer, was returned, along with the following vice presidents: Michael D. Schaeffer, Ira Y. Bain and G. Carroll Diamond, of Washington; John B. Murray, Boston; Henrietta E. Olding, New York; John F. Daniels, Philadelphia; Harold E. Smith, Atlanta; James A. Campbell, Cincinnati; Edgar M. Carpenter, Detroit; Rena B. Smith, St. Paul; C. L. Edwards, St. Louis; Perry S. Myers, Seattle, and James B. Burns, San Francisco.

Walker Vice President
Franklin A. Walker, Lodge 53, Norfolk, was elected vice president from the Fourth Civil Service District, which includes Washington. This position was created at the convention.

The delegates voted to meet in Chicago in 1938. Vice President Burns invited them to San Francisco in 1939, the fair year there.

A move to put the federation's organizers on a commission basis was rejected, but the convention approved a resolution, offered by J. J. McDonald, of Lodge 87, District of Columbia government, calling for franchise for the District citizens.

Other points in the District of Columbia resolution, not retroactive, that a civil service law be enacted for the employees of the District government, patterned after the New York State civil service law; that the same method of apprenticeship for mechanical trades used in the Federal service be applied to the District of Columbia government.

Yaden Gets Ovation.
James G. Yaden, Washington, president of A. F. G. E. District department, was given an ovation when a record of his work was read. The legislation program was delivered and adopted. It contained, in part, these features:

A minimum wage of $1.50 per year for all full-time employees, with statutory automatic annual increases in salary; abolition of the "average clause" and establishment of a uniform promotion policy to be applied to all employees in the civil service.

A five-day week of 35 hours with no decrease in pay to be applied throughout the Government service. Extension of the merit system to include all branches of the civil government.

Alumni to Meet.
Washington alumni of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will gather for their first monthly luncheon of the fall today at 12:30 p. m. in the Cosmos Club Assembly Hall, Madison Place and H street northwest. A sound movie describing the construction of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge will be shown.

British Seaman Killed as Rebels Bomb Valencia

Madrid Shelled Heavily, Loyalists Repulsed on Aragon Front.

By the Associated Press.
Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Spain's civil war raged with revived ferocity on many fronts today as the contending armies strove to establish new gains before cold weather sets in. Valencia was bombed, Madrid shelled and on the Bay of Biscay coast, in Aragon and around Madrid the land forces locked in bitter combat.

Twenty-two were killed, including a British seaman, and 60 wounded when insurgent bombers raided Valencia, government capital.

Five insurgent seaplanes again bombed Portbou, important railway point near the French border in northeast Spain. Rail communications with France were disrupted.

On the Aragon battlefield government troops smashed desperately to cut enemy communications between Teruel and Zaragoza. They were hung back with 4,000 casualties, insurgent military dispatches said.

Insurgent cannon west and south of Madrid pounded the heart of the former capital. Madrid's defenders claimed three small insurgent forts near suburban Carabanchel had been destroyed.

Generalissimo Franco's columns met strong resistance on the Bay of Biscay coast, where a three-pronged drive against Gijon is attempting to bring all northwest Spain under insurgent rule.

Divorcee Claiming Il Duce as Suitor Hunts for Franco

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Mme. Madeleine Fontanges, who received a suspended sentence July 29 for shooting Count Charles Finton de Chambrun, was embarked on a new adventure in Spain tonight.

The dark-eyed divorcee was revealed to have bribed Basques along the frontier to smuggle her into Spain. It was reported the erstwhile actress and journalist, who insisted she had been the mistress of Premier Mussolini for three months, wanted to interview the Spanish Nationalist dictator.

2 Navy Men Wrecked, Note on Beach Says

Lytham, England, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Children picked off the shore of this Lancashire resort today a water-soaked note that purported to be from two United States sailors shipwrecked on Wake Island five years ago. Police, to whom the children gave the note, deciphered the blurred names as Lieut. B. Edwards and Dr. T. Louis, U. S. N.

The note read "To those who find this: We are shipwrecked on Wake Island. By the time this reaches you we shall be dead. Bury our bodies in the sea. God save us all."

Search of available records disclosed no disaster from which such a note might have come.

Mexico Marks Birthday

Mexico City, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Mexico's armed forces paraded today in celebration of the republic's 17th anniversary of independence from Spain. President Lázaro Cárdenas, flanked by cabinet ministers and foreign diplomats, reviewed the military demonstration.

U. S. to Forbid 50 to Return To Spanish War

Those Who Slipped By in Spite of Regulations Lose Passports.

By the Associated Press.

Fifty American citizens, returning to this country after taking part in the Spanish war, have been deprived of their passports under a new State Department policy disclosed yesterday.

Officials announced that passports held by all nationals who have fought on one side or the other will be seized when they return to this country as a penalty for evasion of regulations forbidding travel in Spain.

Since a few weeks after outbreak of the revolution the State Department to keep Americans out of the trouble zone, has refused passports to those expressing an intention to travel to Spain. Passport applicants have been compelled to sign affidavits certifying they do not intend to go to that country and passports issued to them are marked "not valid in Spain."

However, State Department officials said today, scores of persons have gone into the strife-ridden country. The effect of the new action will be to deprive holders of seized passports from going abroad again in the near future.

A century-old law provides penalties for Americans convicted of enlisting in the service of a foreign army but because of the difficulty of securing evidence there never have been any prosecutions.

Brother of Hitler Forbids Political Talk in New Cafe

Berlin, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Alois Hitler, half-brother of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, discovered today that the German burghers who come to his new restaurant aren't content to drink their pilsner in silence. Everyone, it seemed, wanted to talk about Adolf Hitler.

So Alois called in a sign painter to paint a warning across one of the walls, in big German script: "Su di unter fret didick und hol dien mul von politik."

In German slang it means, drink a lot and eat a lot but don't talk politics.

U. S. Tourists Penalized By Russia, Paper Says

Genoa, Italy (Friday), Sept. 17 (A.P.).—The newspaper Il Secolo XIX said today a group of American tourists visiting Yalta, Russia, once the Crimean watering place of the czars, at first was forbidden to go ashore and then was taxed a special landing fee.

The Americans were traveling aboard the liner Roma on a Black Sea cruise, the newspaper said, attributing the action of Soviet authorities to the fact that they were passengers aboard an Italian ship.

Italian Prince Colonna, Head of Clan, Dead at 79

Rome, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Prince Prospero Colonna, 79, head of a family which has been prominent in Italy for 800 years, died today. He was Mayor of Rome 24 years ago. His son, Piero, is Governor of Rome. Another son, Fabrizio, married the former Jeanne Perkins of Washington, D. C., in 1922.

France Seizes Arms of Secret Hooded Society

Group Believed Rightists; Machine Guns, 17 Cases of Grenades Found.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 16.—Police and Surete Nationale agents seized machine guns, hand grenades and other arms tonight in swift raids on branches of a secret society known as "The Hooded Ones."

The raids took place throughout France. A number of arrests were made and a quantity of documents seized.

Four persons were held in Paris and authorities predicted the number of arrests would mount after the documents were investigated. Officials at the ministry of the interior said tonight the secret society apparently was a branch of a "Rightist organization," but added they were uncertain with which group it was affiliated.

The raiding officers said existence of "The Hooded Ones" was discovered during investigation of a murder case. Police surrounded meeting places and headquarters of the secret society in Paris and in the provinces. The arms seized included a number of "latest model" machine guns, high-powered rifles and 17 cases of hand grenades.

Undiscriminating Economy.

There is a suggestion of haste and lack of discrimination about the campaign of various local business groups to hold appropriations for the next fiscal year rigidly at the level of 1935 spending. Before clamoring for cuts in outlays which would make tax reductions possible, the spokesmen for business should pause to consider whether the District can follow their advice without neglecting certain vitally important duties to the population as a whole.

At best a very small additional sum will be available to meet the needs of a rapidly-growing community. A great many inherently desirable and worthy projects will have to be turned down for lack of funds. But there are also some responsibilities that the District has heretofore shirked—notably making systematic provision for its employable unemployed—that can no longer be pushed aside. Welfare authorities state that a very large although indeterminate number of persons are now in urgent need of assistance. Furthermore, as the WPA reduces the scale of its operations, the District, as well as other local governments, will, of course, be called upon to care for additional numbers.

An illustration of the kind of emergency likely to result from shifting relief responsibilities to the shoulders of the local authorities is afforded by a current announcement of the Parent-Teacher Association. That body has served notice that without the aid of WPA funds it will be unable to continue the free hot lunches for 8,000 needy children. It is highly debatable whether free school luncheons should be financed out of District funds. But it is certainly a responsibility of the District to see that these needy school children do not grow up to be public charges as a result of malnutrition.

To look merely at expenditure totals without weighing the case for proposed increases in outlays as short-sighted as to spend without considering the cost. The heavily-taxed businessmen of the District are rightly opposed to any additions to expenditures that would add to their existing burdens. But they have not made out a convincing case in favor of reducing taxes merely by flatly protesting against any increases in outlays, regardless of how essential they may be.

The Franc Slips Down.

The sudden drop in the value of the franc demonstrates that the French government is still confronted by very difficult financial and economic problems. Pending their solution the franc will doubtless continue to follow the characteristic behavior of all weak and unstable currencies. It will, of course, be impossible to restore confidence, or induce frightened French investors to repatriate funds shipped abroad, so long as conditions within the country point toward further devaluation.

When the Blum government abandoned the hopeless struggle to maintain the currency at its former level the financial tension in France was momentarily lifted. The limited depreciation in the value of the franc brought some relief from the pressure of high prices and afforded the treasury a windfall gained by revaluing gold holdings and by confiscating the profits of devaluation. However, the breathing spell was brief, as well-informed students of French conditions had predicted. Prices have continued to rise rapidly, tending to offset the stimulus to production and to export trade resulting from devaluation.

When the Chaumets government superceded the Blum regime, it fell heir to a virtually empty treasury and a host of troublesome financial and economic problems. Yet in its brief period of power Finance Minister Lannet seems to have accomplished as much, not more, than could reasonably have been expected toward improving the government's fiscal position.

The pruning of ordinary expenditures, and the recent amalgamation of the railways under a government-controlled corporation, are important steps toward cutting budgetary deficits and removing one prime cause of investment distrust. Of course, the unsettled political outlook in Europe is a perennial source of anxiety which greatly increases the difficulty of breathing a psychological atmosphere favorable to normal investment operations.

Careful steps are now being taken to modify, without fundamentally affecting, the rapid sequence of reform laws which have created serious difficulties for many French employers and acted as a brake upon industrial activity. But there remains a danger that this and other plans for combating the rise in internal prices and stimulating production may come too late to stave off demands for higher wages to compensate for the rapid rise in living costs. There is also another source of weakness in the heavily adverse French commercial balance. The excess of imports over exports is likely to total from 16,000,000,000 to 18,000,000,000 francs for the present year.

Under the circumstances, the decision to let the franc descend to lower levels seems a wise move on the part of the authorities. A sharp and decisive drop in exchange values should provide encouragement to export activity before domestic price advances have had time to neutralize the effect of such a stimulus. On the other hand, import buying will be discouraged by the decline and thus the adverse trade balance will be reduced with a consequent strengthening of franc exchange.

The failure of the French to protect the franc against further declines, therefore, should not be interpreted as a confession of failure or a sign that conditions in France are going from bad to worse. On the contrary, a good deal of encouragement may be derived from the fact that the present government is convinced of the futility of trying to maintain the currency at a level which prevents the successful execution of essential emergency measures. Without such drastic action, no amount of artificial support for the franc could ever re-establish confidence in its stability, since the very foundations for stability would be lacking.

After 150 Years.

The sponsoring committee could not have chosen a better speaker than Senator Borah for the inauguration of the Constitution Day ceremonies. And Senator Borah, great liberal and profound student of American history though he is, could scarcely have made a finer speech than that which was delivered at Constitution Hall last night.

It was a temperate, thoughtful and impressive address of the type which is all too rare in these days of inflammatory oratory and demagogic diatribes. It sought not to arouse passion, nor to inculcate prejudice, but merely to further understanding of that organic law to the wisdom of which so large a part of the blessings of this country must be attributed.

Yet there was something deeply moving in the very simplicity and restraint of the Senator's remarks. The dignity of the speaker, the value of the knowledge accumulated in his long lifetime of public service, alike weighted his words with a solemnity which none of his great audience can have overlooked.

Much of what Mr. Borah said might easily be regarded as intentionally applicable to current issues. Time and again his listeners must have drawn conclusions pertinent to the fight to preserve the Supreme Court. But in such remarks there was nothing in any way prejudiced or partisan. If they made a casual or hostile attitude toward judicial independence appear as wanton misgovernment, that is because such an attitude does actually strike at the very foundations of the American system.

Only in one instance did Senator Borah seem to digress to make his argument inescapably apposite to current events. That was when, in caustic, searing sentences, he attacked the effrontery of the German government in claiming immunity for any propaganda activities its agents may care to launch in the United States.

Up to the point of transgressing American laws, said the Senator, Nazi envoys may feel assured of protection, "if not respect." But should our laws be violated in these activities the transgressors "will be punished regardless of the country from which they come." And such punishment, Senator Borah warned, may take the form of the extreme penalty, leaving Berlin to decide its subsequent course of action as it sees fit.

This overdue warning to an unnamed government, which we have here taken the liberty of identifying, was quite possibly made with prior knowledge of the Department of State. But it was not in any case a real digression from Senator Borah's theme. Essentially this was that constitutional government, as launched in this country 150 years ago today, is well worth defending.

Whether directed from without or within, whether inspired by foreign envy or domestic defeatism, the attack on the American system of democracy "calls for action, not surrender." And it was as a plea for such action, temperate, self-controlled, but iron in its resolution, that Mr. Borah's speech was particularly telling.

The current anniversary will, as Senator Borah said, "call forth many words of praise for our great charter of government." But "its measure of worth is revealed and confirmed not by words but by experience."

There was no smug satisfaction with things as they are, no trite references to "God's country" or similar shallow oratory in the Senator's speech. Recognizing the ever-present need for progress, he called for its fulfillment through loyalty to fundamental principles. If such principles have been tried and tested they are worthy of unyielding defense; if they were true in the "horse-and-buggy days," they are nonetheless true in a more complex era.

None speak with more authority on the American system of government than Senator Borah. None have done more than he to preserve and pass on unimpaired "the priceless heritage which has been entrusted for a brief time to our keeping." None question that he has fought the good fight unwaveringly in this respect. And last night he encouraged a host of others to keep aloft that flag whose full significance he understands so well.

Pitiful Dilemma.

President Roosevelt's partial embargo on the shipment of specified munitions to China and Japan strikingly illustrates the dilemma into which the United States has been plunged by the neutrality law.

For very sound reasons the President has thus far carefully refrained from invoking that law with respect to the hostilities now taking place in the Far East. To do so might easily make a desperate situation worse. It would obviously destroy any influence we now have, and may at the proper moment be able to exercise, in helping to restore peace in a part of the world where our interests, present and prospective, are considerable.

It would give Japan, which has hitherto avoided declaring war on China, the pretext it needs for extending its present blockade of Chinese ports to cover foreign shipping. And it would make meaningless and hypocritical that statement of principles governing our foreign policy issued by Secretary Hull on July 16, to say nothing of our more definite treaty obligations.

If these principles have any meaning at all they create the presumption that as between a nation that is peaceful and one that is not, as between a nation that lives up to its international obligations and one that openly violates its pledges, our moral support goes to the former and must be withheld from the latter. Yet the neutrality law blindly ignores such differences. It would have us treat the international gangster and his victim in exactly the same way.

Nevertheless, a large body of public opinion has pinned its faith to the efficacy of the neutrality act, as if it were a magic talisman capable of insuring our isolation. In particular, many regard it as particularly heinous and dangerous for Americans to sell munitions to any nation actually engaged in war-making.

The clamor of this group, as well as the desire to avoid having to apply the neutrality act in full, has now led President Roosevelt to ban ships owned by the United States Government from carrying a few specified munitions to China and Japan. Furthermore, privately owned American vessels engaged in such trade are warned that they do so at their own risk.

Should Japan now interfere with American vessels carrying the banned articles to China, as it is openly encouraged to do by the President's action, no diplomatic conflict would presumably arise between Japan and the United States. And Japan could continue, so far as we are concerned, to be a nonbelligerent. The full application of the neutrality act may thus be postponed a while longer.

But beyond this very incomplete embargo on arms the Administration is not prepared to go. The rumor that the Government is considering an embargo on the transport of cotton to China and Japan has received the vigorous denial of Secretary Roper.

It is apparently one thing to stop the shipment of a few war implements but quite another to interfere with the shipment of commodities the export of which affects the livelihood of large sections of the Nation. Yet cotton is as essential to war-making as are guns, bullets and airplanes. And what is true for cotton is equally true of oil, copper, scrap iron, chemicals and many other commodities that enter into our Far Eastern trade.

We cannot have the best of both worlds. We cannot, simply by preventing the transport of guns and airplanes in American bottoms, while permitting other trade to go on, isolate ourselves from the war in Asia. Nor can we have the neutrality law and a foreign policy effective for peace as well.

While straddling on the horns of this dilemma the Administration deserves sympathy. But it is a sorry spectacle indeed to see a nation which might be so potent for peace wobbling like a rudderless ship in a turbulent sea.

Excellent Propaganda.

The action of the Spanish government in authorizing payments of commercial debts owed American individuals and corporations, but held up because of the difficulties arising out of the civil war, is as heartening as it is courageous.

Unquestionably the move has its propagandist overtones. This is as much as admitted by Premier Negrin himself. In his statement to Mr. Shorover, the head of the official Spanish sales agency in the United States, Dr. Negrin declared that the government's action in planning to pay its debts was intended, among other things, to furnish "proof of its good intentions to fulfill all international obligations, even at the cost of sacrifices."

The world cannot have too much of this kind of propaganda. And, so far as the Negrin government is concerned, the decision to undertake the payment of between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000 owed since early in 1935, as well as to begin negotiations with firms whose property has been damaged during the civil war, is indicative both of the strength and the essential moderation of the regime.

Were loyalist Spain, as her enemies insist, simply an offshoot of Moscow, it is difficult to believe the Valencia government would display the respect for foreign property rights now being shown. Probably the government's action will be irksome to the left-wing extremists within and without the Spanish Popular Front. But apparently Premier Negrin and his colleagues feel themselves strong enough to override any opposition from that quarter.

Still Seaworthy.

Letters to the Editor

We Can Do Nothing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Burch in his letter in Tuesday's Post is correct when he says that the present troubles of the world can be traced largely to excessive populations of certain countries presently held from migration by artificial restrictions. But he says, "We must do something reasonable if we want to prevent a general war," and by "we" I deduce that he means the United States.

Apparently he believes the attitude of the United States in its foreign relations is unreasonable, and that by letting it be known "that we will loan money or resources to our fellow democracies we may, in some mysterious manner, appease the hunger of the overcrowded countries of central Europe."

I confess I cannot follow his reasoning. I do not attempt to defend the present governments of Italy and Germany, and I would particularly like to see them thrown out of Spain, but let it be remembered that our "loans" of billions of dollars to England and France during the World War (and which turned out to be the most generous gifts in history) made possible an allied victory which has led directly to the present armament race. England and France took advantage of the victory which United States arms and money insured to take the colonies of the central powers. We got nothing but a lot of bad debts and higher taxes. Even if it would be "reasonable" to assure England and France that they could depend upon more loans in event of war, I fail to see how it is going to help any. On the contrary, were those countries assured of United States support they would be just that much more willing to start another conflict.

Let England and France start the exercise of reason. Let them take Germany at her word and restore her colonies. Let them make an effort to arrive at a fair settlement of their debts to us. Then it will be time for the United States to take part in negotiations leading to further readjustments in the interest of world peace. In short, until some common sense and reason is exercised by the democracies of Europe, nothing we can do is going to stop the goose-stepping hordes of Europe from marching to another Armageddon.

Black Reactions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our New Jersey Senator, A. Harry Moore, now campaigning for a third term as Governor, tells us he would not have voted for Justice Black had he known of his Klan affiliations.

When the President proposed his court-packing scheme, Senator Moore made a statement to the effect that a program would interfere with the independence of the judiciary. He was opposed. Yet, when Senator Black's name came before the Senate and Senators Copeland and Burke reported Black's alleged Klan affiliations, Burke even stating witnesses could be obtained to appear before a Senate committee, where was New Jersey's senior Senator? He was in the Senate. And what did he say? He never opened his mouth.

He is a lawyer and he knows there is imposed upon him a Constitutional duty in the matter of executive appointments, especially to the Supreme Court bench. He knows also that New Jersey is no Klan-loving State and he knows also that appointment to the highest tribunal of any man who may belong to any organization dedicated to discrimination against all Catholics, Negroes and Jews is not exactly preserving the "independence of the judiciary."

There was one thing Moore could have done. He could have walked over to Black, who sits within 15 feet of him, and he could have asked Black point-blank for the answer to the question, "Are you or have you been a Klansman?"

Moore may say this duty devolved upon the President, or that the President, with the investigative genius of the Department of Justice behind him, should have ascertained what, apparently, one or two newspapers have discovered. But Moore will find the issue will plague him in New Jersey this fall even more than his lone Democratic vote in the Senate against the social security act. A JERSEYMAN.
Washington, Sept. 15.

paign against the Masonic order, and surely the American people will not tolerate discrimination against one secret order in preference for another. There has been no hullabaloo in the American press regarding the holding of high office by members of the Masonic order, the Knights of Columbus, or the B'nai B'rith, each based on a distinct religious principle.

We do not generally find Roman Catholics in the Masonic order, we do not find Protestants in the Knights of Columbus, neither do we find Catholics or Protestants in the B'nai B'rith order. So we have orders representing different fundamental principles, and if we are to safeguard true American democracy we must allow all orders the same rights under the law, or else do away with all, which is, of course, totally impossible.

The real spirit of a true democracy should tolerate all secret orders which fall within the laws and realize that those which do not stand up under normal conditions without propaganda either way will fall of their own weight. This is the usual attitude toward any new social or fraternal organization until its right to existence has been proven.

There is no reason why Mr. Justice Black, even if he is now a member of the Klu Klux Klan, could not serve all people impartially. As a matter of fact, it is customary for a judge who is known to be of one faith or principle to be more lenient in judging those of other principles. The very purpose of keeping down the charge of bias because of a different fundamental philosophy. Therefore, condemning Mr. Justice Black because he happened to join some order, rather than on the basis of ability, is totally illogical.

ELMER C. CROWELL
Washington, Sept. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I say a few words in reply to W. H. P.'s letter of September 15 in the Senate against the social security act. A JERSEYMAN.

Whether Justice Black is found to be a member of the Klan, or to be sharing the Klan's prejudices or not, has everything to do with his fitness as a member of our highest tribunal. Everyone knows that if a jury member is in the least prejudiced he is not allowed to serve on that jury.

For a Supreme Court justice to be prejudiced against certain groups of people, who are citizens of the United States, would certainly be against the democratic principles of this country.

Bad Manners In Theaters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to you because it seems to me that this is the best way of getting my views before the public. I simply cannot understand why people will go to picture shows and talk and giggle all the way through the performance, making it impossible for anyone else around them to enjoy the show. There are lots of people like myself, of moderate income, who can only afford one show a week. And then to have that one ruined by the inconsideration of someone back of me is maddening.

If you ask them to be quiet, or turn round and look at them, the offenders usually tell you that if you don't like it, you can change your seat. But that is, of course, impossible in a crowded movie house.

What I want to know is—do ushers in movie houses have the power to ask such offensive mischiefs to leave the theater? I have always hesitated to call on an usher for fear he could do nothing in the matter and I would be further harassed by the hecklers.

Woman's Place.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We shall never end labor troubles until it goes into effect, "Who shall not work, shall not eat." Capt. John Smith knew God's wisdom and its good effects, and ended labor troubles. We also must put to work "No one can serve two masters." One job to the person. You can't be a wife and a nurse, or a wife and a stenographer. The wife must be the wife in the home, and that is a mighty big job. It is a waste of life, that woman who seeks the outside life after marriage.

The world's best service, a good home. "The woman must not usurp authority above the man." When she does the man's job she is killing good ambitions, that of husbands and sons. The sister needs the brother to look after her, and the wife needs the support, that of her husband, caring for her to keep up his manhood. The promises before God—to support, provide, and comfort and cherish the woman he marries—making his answers good before God!

Mule's Triumph.

The case of the mule whose high achievement at the Pinnacles of the Dan has just been recorded is one that shows how firmly the feet of this animal are planted in modern engineering despite the high-powered competition of machine tractors, and why.

Here this intelligent beast of burden was confronted with a new situation, making extraordinary demands upon him, in which his previous experience was of little value. The human hand could not offer much assistance. Briefly, the task was to draw a small trolley car 1,200 feet into the heart of a mountain that is being tunneled, and haul it back full of the slag and fragments that are broken loose by frequent blasting.

It is just this sort of successful jockeying for position, that is enabling the mule to win out in a race for survival, in which his more aristocratic cousin, the horse, is not doing so well. He apparently never holds his head higher than the job in hand warrants. Here, indeed, is a servant of man who provides not mere power but a whole system of accommodation and the robot that will replace him is as yet undreamed.

The Post Impressionist

Revival of Girdling.

The other day, whilst flipping my lower lip at Random—my butler—my attention was called to a heavy stack of fan mail.

Winnowing out from it the summonses, subpoenas and wedding announcements of former sweethearts, I reduced this to one letter from a charming person named Mrs. Amy N. Bryant of Chevy Chase, who wanted some "data and advice" on how to girdle the District.

The Chevy Chase Woman's Club's nature section is all set for the trip, she states, and has already been divided into two groups—saunterers and walkers—for the trek around the District line. The reason she wrote me is that I girdled the District last year.

It is high time to reveal that the reason I girdled the District is because I spent all the money that the Editor gave me for girdling the globe. So I girdled the District, closely followed by a tough-looking gentleman from our business office who kept on waving some papers at me and screaming something. I lost him at Sixty-fifth street south-east, and I understand he has never been able to make his way back to civilization, as we have laughingly chosen to call it.

Now if there is one thing I am teeming with, it is advice. If Mrs. Bryant cares to show up at the office I will fix her with my glittering eye and tell her a thing or three about District-girdling.

This little-known and unloved sport is characterized chiefly by the number of interesting people's dog meets. The smell of a District girdler seems to arouse the beast in dogs, large or small. They find it singularly infuriating. So it is best to wear someone else's legs, while girdling. If this proves impossible, get two sets of catcher's shin-guards and put them on front and back. Then each night, before you make camp, take a pair of pliers and pull the dogs' teeth out of the shin-guards. This is much better than extracting them from one's own legs, experienced District-girdlers believe. In case any of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club's nature section objects to wearing catcher's shin-guards while strolling around the District, that is their affair, and besides, plastic surgery costs practically nothing these days. New legs can even be made out of compressed soy beans, according to the scientific circles I frequent after Ceres has closed up at night.

Mrs. Bryant wanted some data on the trip. Unfortunately the only notes I made turned out to be completely illegible except for the notation: "Alice Faye—mummmmm!" I can't imagine what I had in mind at the time, or what it has to do with District-girdling, but that will give you a faint idea of the stress under which all such scientific expeditions operate. The reason the rest of my notes are illegible is that I made them with the butt-end of my pencil, being in a hurry. I do not recommend this practice.

There is only one easy stretch in the entire 30-odd miles—and boy, are some of those miles odd—and that is along Western avenue. This is a breeze, involving nothing more difficult than dodging real estate subdivisions. The slightest weakness here is fatal. If you merely falter, you will find yourselves moving into a new home with the plaster still wet. If you bend over to tie a shoelace you will straighten up inside your new house, with the agent explaining about the 1,000 easy payments as he presses the deed into your hand.

The only difficulty about the Western avenue section is that you will probably never get that far. The District line, you see, crosses over the backyard of Felix Morley, editor of The Post, at Westmoreland Circle and he is pretty sick of the whole thing. Immediately after I passed through there with a covey of dogs trailing me—right through his hydrangeas it was—he vowed to drop the next girdler in his tracks. Now of course, the Chevy Chase Woman's Club's nature section probably will have a lot more than I had with those dogs, but I just want to warn you that the man is cold steel where his hydrangeas are concerned.

Now there are some low characters who may scoff at District-girdling. I am frank to say, Mrs. Bryant, that I am not one of those. I am still laughing at the geographers who say Mount Rainier is the highest point in the United States. It is bitter laughter, yes, because I am the only one who has climbed Matterhorn, Jr., or the snow-capped knob between New Hampshire avenue northeast and Eastern avenue, and I certainly am not going back there to prove it.

Mrs. Bryant asks whether the trip is feasible. This depends entirely on whether it is feasible for her to secure permission from the National Training School to cross their grounds and then whether she can cross the swamp that distinguishes much of Bladensburg; whether she can get permission from Bolling Field to go along its river-edge after going over the monotonously impassable roads of the Southwest section, and whether she uses a canoe on the home stretch along the river. This, and the fact that maps are practically no good at all—showing streets where they aren't and none where they are—are the type of difficulties that forge girdlers' souls in the furnace.

I hope you make it, Mrs. Bryant. I only warn you that it will cost enough money to burn a damp dog.

Dramatic Meeting.

WHAT WOULD YOU give for a ring-side seat to Mr. Roosevelt's interview with Hugo Black when that progressive statesman of the New South returns from Europe to take up the duty of liberalizing the United States Supreme Court with the character and mentality of a man who hesitates to deny that he is or ever was a member of an outfit that terrorized the neighbors by tearing around the country in masks in the dark of the moon, shouting "Wool" and burning fiery crosses on the hilltops? Won't that be something?

Because the President says he did not have information that Hugo was a Kluxer when he sent his name to the Senate, and you can be sure that if he had had such information he would have skipped lightly over Hugo Black. And Hugo, on his part, if it is true that he once subscribed to the juvenile foolishness of Kludks, Klads and great imperial flocks and the mean and cowardly intimidation of minorities by masked men, put Mr. Roosevelt out on a limb in accepting the appointment. If it is true that he once ran around in a dunce cap and nightgown, he knew in his heart that this was enough to eliminate him from consideration and to block his confirmation by his colleagues in the Senate.

IF IT IS TRUE—you have to keep on repeating the phrase "if it is true," because it isn't positively established yet and Hugo hasn't said whether it is true or not—it is true, then he obtained his appointment by a concealment of information which amounted to deception and his ratification by false pretenses. And any way you look at it he created an unnecessary mess, and put the President in a fix.

Whether he clings to his job or resigns, he has raised again a sad and shameful problem which seemed to have died of its own poison ten years ago and caused a revival of the bigotry and suspicion among otherwise friendly neighbors. The salesmen are on the road again now with their sucker lists trying to sign up old members and enlist new ones, and this would not be so if Hugo had had the candor to speak frankly even at the sacrifice of his personal ambition—if it is true. And worst of all to the President, Hugo Black has fetched Mr. Roosevelt's court plan, one gosh-almighty kick in the flask because, look, this plan was advanced as an effort to liberalize the Supreme Court, and the first chance Mr. Roosevelt had to take a progressive, square-shooting justice he named a Kluxer—if it is true.

WHY, THE KLUX were primitive fascists, like Mussolini's early strong-arm and castor-oil mobs. Being sworn to secrecy and addicted to masks, they would shake a man's hand and smile to his face in the light of day and terrorize his family at night. He would boycott his business while pretending to be his friend, and as a character reference for the outfit you may look to the prison records of them all, where at last the boss Klansman of them all was sent to prison for life for murder by rape.

If the plan to pack the Supreme Court—and Mr. Roosevelt honestly believes it is a plan to unpack the Court—had any remaining ghost of a chance to get by Congress, what has Hugo Black done to that chance by his concealment of his membership in the Ku Klux Klan if he is or ever was a member? The Senators who were singled out for political execution for opposing the Court plan will be able to go to their constituents and point out how careless, how reckless Mr. Roosevelt was with one appointment and take credit for the fact that this mistake was not multiplied by six. The President, the Court plan and all the honest progressives, radicals and liberals have been whipped for the personal ambition of one man—if it is true. And would you call him a smart man who thought he could get away with it, entirely aside from the matter of his honesty toward a friend who was good enough to raise him to the topmost peak of his profession?

THAT WILL BE a historic and dramatic moment when, after stalling off the meeting, Hugo Black comes back to the States and goes down to Washington and up the drive to the White House and into Mr. Roosevelt's office to look him in the eye and try to explain why he didn't think it worth mentioning that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan—if he was. Say what he will, Mr. Roosevelt will know and Hugo will know he knows. What a pal Hugo turned out to be—if it is true! And has anyone heard him say no?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

War, 1937 Model.

Scene—Any home in a modern undeclared-war area. Popper is reading his evening paper. Mommer is trying to get something on the radio. There are continuous explosions and flashes of light without.

Pop (as a shower of plaster from the ceiling depends on him)—Rather messy here tonight, eh, what?

Mom (as a bullet whines through a window)—There you go complaining again! Every little thing, no matter how trivial, bothers you.

Pop (as there is a particularly deafening explosion in the street below)—Is that somebody knocking?

Mom (tuning in on the radio)—It's a little loud for that. Don't pay any attention if it's somebody who wants to see us let him ring the doorbell.

Pop (as bullets splatter all over the room to the rat-tat-tat of machine guns)—Is everything all right, Mom?

Mom—Sure, everything's all right. Why?

Pop—I thought I heard one of those bullets hit the radio.

Mom—You worry too much.

Pop—Whatever trying to get on that thing anyhow?

Mom (as a shell explodes over the house, knocking in the roof)—There's a radio broadcast of war at 8:15. Pop—A real war? Where?

Mom—I don't know, one of those countries where they still have 'em, I guess.

Pop (as a projectile zooms through the wall, covering the radio and Mom with debris)—Did you get it?

Mom (crawling out and brushing herself off)—Not clearly. They must be having a thunderstorm somewhere.

Junior (enters the room. He is in full military uniform, with his gas mask on and carrying gun and bayonet. He is bleeding and limps badly. He sinks into a chair and coughs violently. Pop and Mom barely look up.)

Mom (nonchalantly)—Have a nice day, Clem?

Junior (without taking off the gas mask)—It was okay, except for the heat.

Pop—Whatever been doing?

Junior—The general won't tell me, but I have my suspicions.

Mom—You're bleeding, ain't ya?

Junior—I thought so, but you can't be too sure of anything!

Pop (examining his weapons)—Nice gun and bayonet you got here... Is it REAL?

(The house is now in flames and it collapses under more shelling. Tanks rumble by and the roar of war planes is heard overhead.)

Pop (putting down his newspaper)—Mom, I feel uneasy. Don't you think we ought to find a new place to rent?

Mom—What's the matter with this one?

Pop—I don't like its location in case WAR'S DECLARED!

London Letter

Correspondent Describes Confusion In Ranks Of British Labor Regarding Domestic Policy And Foreign Affairs.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

LONDON.

THE ANNUAL Trades Union Congress is in session, and Mr. Ernest Bevin is presiding over the delegates from whose ranks he and his permanent officials of the executive committee have pruned all extremists who are likely to disagree with him. Later in the session the Congress will discuss the new labor policy on defense as published recently.

The new policy admits that even if a Labor government were returned to power it would be unable to reverse the present rearmament program; it differs, of course, from the government on the use of our strength, but it would permit continued rearmament. The engineers union wish to condemn this reversal of the labor position, but they are unlikely to carry the delegates with them.

Mr. Bevin could open the Congress therefore with the knowledge that what he said would go. This was his program: No return to the gold standard; prepare schemes of public works for the impending recession in business activity; build up a national surplus in prosperity so that unemployment pay could be maintained and taxation not increased during depression; lengthen the period and raise the amount of unemployment relief; increase pensions; raise the school-leaving age, shorten hours of labor. He wants to develop co-operation between scientists and trade unions. And his foreign policy is to return to the League, and rearm.

One important comment by Mr. Bevin reflects the concern of the trade unionists to guard their privileges. Our movement, said Mr. Bevin, "is a voluntary one, and the claim for state regulation must not be carried too far. It might easily lead us into the slippery slope of the totalitarian state, under capitalist control, by which our very liberty may be destroyed."

This is an amazing sentiment to be uttered by the president of the trade unionists, whose official policy is socialism.

Division of Opinion
Stultifying Labor.

THE WHOLE speech by Bevin illustrates the stultifying division of opinion which is now characteristic of the labor movement. The trade unionist section, or at least the official of the movement, are conservative, want to protect their special rights at home without government interference and for all their talk of supporting the League of Nations they are internationally conditioned toward rearmament and isolation as a foreign policy.

The so-called intelligentsia of the labor movement are at present an uninspiring lot, with no power of appeal to the electorate of the country. So that throughout the labor movement there is a feeling of apathy, or failure to live up to the party's great origins and traditions.

When a man becomes original, eager, enterprising and unorthodox in the support of socialism, he is thrust eagerly out of the fold by the official righteously.

Tories All Agree With Labor Chief.

MR. BEVIN'S warning against the danger of excessive state regulation met with considerable comment in the British press. The conservative organs agreed with him, because they represent interests which also fear excessive state intervention, not because the present conservative government is regulating industry in any interest but that of industry itself, but because a future Labor government might regulate with different intentions. Mr. Bevin is welcomed by them because he is providing ammunition against the official aims of his own party.

The Labor paper is controlled by the Trades Union Council, and therefore reflects the view of Mr. Bevin, Sir Walter Gifford and their like. But the Liberal papers saw in Bevin's uneasiness a sign that the trade union movement was selfishly determined to regulate state regulation so soon as it began to touch the privileges of the trade unions.

Mr. Bevin saw possible fascism in excessive state regulation; the Liberals saw fascism more likely to develop through the assertion by any partial interest of special privileges against the community.

A long correspondence on British foreign policy has been conducted in the columns of the Times. The argument has centered round the desirability or possibility of mutual toleration between democracies and dictatorships.

Mr. A. L. Rowse, expressing a labor view, argues that mutual toleration is impossible. The foreign policy of a state, he maintains, is largely dependent upon the character of its internal regime. The dictatorships of Europe are inherently a threat to European peace, and can never be anything else. The interests of England are therefore bound up with the Left countries of Europe, both for protection of England and because it is to Europe's interest not to be dominated by a dictatorial power.

OBJECTION to this view is obviously taken by those who like the dictatorships. But they are a small element in Britain. Opposition to the Left view is more plausibly expressed in the Times correspondence by Lord Lothian. He sees the ultimate remedy to Europe's difficulties, the difficulties of the Left view is more plausible, only through a European federation, for which Europe is not yet ready.

International problems must be solved by agreement or by force. Mr. Rowse's policy of emphasizing ideological differences is fatal because it leads only to war, and out of war you get neither democracy nor peace. Or, as Mr. Lothian says, "the only way to peace is to fight."

This exploring the possibilities of agreement includes, to judge by other letters in the correspondence, recognition of the conquest in Abyssinia and allowing Hitler and Germany to establish Franco in Spain.

Mr. Marriot puts it: "That we should revive friendly relations with Italy is surely desired by all who do not wish to see the whole world engulfed in fire. But friendship is impossible so long as Great Britain continues to indulge in foolish little prickles."

Dr. Headlam contrasts the labor policy "which must inevitably divide Europe into two camps, one of armed camps," with the government policy designed "if humanly possible to prevent such an eventuality."

MR. WICKHAM STEED writes: "If our policy induces a belief among other people which, like ourselves, is based on the love of freedom, we shall not raise a finger to help them should they be exposed to foreign aggression, we may foster this aggression and help to bring on a major war. Our policy may drive these peoples to make terms with potential aggressors and thus to leave us in a political and moral isolation the reverse of splendid."

And if it be said that some of these other peoples are allies or associates of Soviet Russia, who is "just as bad" as Fascist Italy or Nazi Germany, the answer is that Soviet Russia, for her own reasons, desires to avoid any major war, whereas the desires of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany to avoid it is not clear.

Unless, therefore, we are prepared to defend our fundamental liberal ideals, not more our local or material interests, there may presently be no cause in support of which the British peoples, as a whole, would spontaneously rally.

And Mr. Rowse replies to Lord Lothian's plea for agreement with the Fascist powers with the claim that it is not even possible to get such agreement, except on help from their own terms. "Nor would you get agreement even if you gave away all along the line to them, for they do not believe in international order. Their own will, their own interests, are their only law."

I THINK THE MOST intriguing note de plume for an author that I've heard in a long time is "GT-99". He, or it, wrote a book called "Twenty Years a Labor Spy". "GT-99" (I call him GT) hasn't even told his publishers his real name... Never a dull moment in the publishing business...

HOW'D YOU LIKE that Miguel Covarrubias four-color frontpiece for "Madame Flawery Sentiment"? You did? Well, Covici, Friede has had a thousand four-color reproductions run off, and you can have 'em by writing to them at 452 Fourth Avenue, New York City...

HARVEY KLEMMER, who wrote "Harbor Nights," isn't like that at all...

I WISH THESE publishers of murder mystery books would stop sending me such blood-curdling letters... The one from Simon & Schuster this morning started right in talking about death for dear Clara... How she got it in the back... How she had it coming to her, etc... Now I spend most of my time looking under my desk...

AFTER 25 YEARS in the newspaper and advertising business in China, Carl Crow, author of the new book on the Chinese, "400 Million Customers," recently published by Harper, was forced to flee from Shanghai... His publishers are apparently all upset because Mr. Crow was allowed "only" what he carried in two bags... Poor man... Imagine landing in New York with only two bags... What's the world coming to? Why, it's getting so you can't even get in the news reels any more unless you have 25 trunks...

The Little Lamp

By Bett Hooper

Katherine Mansfield.

"IT'S ONLY IMPATIENCE," Katherine Mansfield once wrote to her husband, John Middleton Murry. "There is so much to write and there is so little time." But during the all too brief years in which she managed to put words on paper despite a serious illness, she wrote 88 short stories. These have been brought together in a single volume entitled "The Short Stories of Katherine Mansfield."

The letters and journals of Katherine Mansfield clearly indicate her never-ceasing consciousness that death was looking over her shoulder as she wrote. Particularly is this so of the letters she mailed in agony and desperation to her husband in London. It was true, as she said, that suffering changed everything for her—even the appearance of the world is not the same. Perhaps it was this keen awareness of impending doom that made her determined to leave something anything would survive in a more perfect form than the diseased body which she dragged around. And that this survival might be "pure," might be crystal clear; might shine as brightly as the little lamp in "The Doll's House."

Mrs. Mansfield disciplined her output to the extent that, for sheer style and composition, she was surpassed by no one save Willa Cather and Virginia Woolf.

KATHERINE MANSFIELD had an essentially neat mind. The World War upset this sense of orderliness and caused her to retreat within herself and to turn her gaze backward at the peaceful scenes of a sensitive childhood. It was her stated intention that she would write nothing worth doing until she had, in the profoundest sense of the word, "accepted life."

Yet her method of acceptance might well be challenged. She never really accepted; she simply withdrew. During the whole period of the war, which left her so shocked and shaken, she never once mentioned it in any of her writings. She completely ignored it and devoted all her time to recapturing the sheer joy of living which she had known as a little girl called "Kass."

KATHERINE MANSFIELD'S obsession for neatness was as eternal war with the artist in her. The one strove for perfection in detail; the other for effect at no matter what cost. "All this self-examination, this fastidious probing, this hovering on the brink," she once wrote, "it's all wrong!" Then, paradoxically, she knew how I choose my words; they can't be changed.

Depending in part on the transient moment to convey her meaning, she busied herself with ephemeral things such as white smoke floating against the roof of a bleak station; a bright piece of late afternoon sun; a pear tree in flower. Yet there is never a line that is superfluous; never a dripping adjective; never a phrase that hasn't its own niche.

THERE IS A peculiar guilelessness to Katherine Mansfield's stories about children. They were written out of her own lilting reaction to life. The charm of Kasia is the charm of Mansfield, "Kass," exclaimed an aunt in the story, "At the Bazaar," "why are you such a messy child?" "Me, Aunt Beryl? Kasia stared at her. What had she done now? She had dug a river down the middle of her porch, filled it and was eating the banks away."

Here, truly, is the way a child's mind works. But it was not only children whom Katherine Mansfield understood and pictured with tenderness. It was old women, and lovers, pitiful little governesses. Germans buying themselves with dignity, Britains practicing nonchalance. It is amazing how much she managed to observe and recreate in the art of silence of her own mind. Nothing escaped her notice—a toilet set "sprinkled with tiny apples," "the red and yellow tulips, heavy with flowers, seemed to leap upon the dusk," "the pink convolvulus that threaded through and through the sandhills." Nothing was too alien for her imagination to house itself in the form of an old, old woman looking down the years; the frustration of a wife who comes too late to her springtime; the tiredness of a shop girl who has nothing but her dreams to look forward to. Her feeling for humanity was boundless.

KATHERINE MANSFIELD desired, above all things "to be strong in possession" of her own soul. "I fall on my knees before love and beauty," she once exclaimed. "If I can only make myself worthy..." But hers was not a self-abandonment of talent so much as a fear that she would not be loyal to her capacity for truth. She was like Lawrence of Arabia in her quest for the whole thing. She was like him, too, in her knowledge that it's the stopping short that needs skillfulness. She held herself down to the recording of the little moments.

Katherine Mansfield died in her early thirties. But not before she had finished these superb short stories which are bound together in one volume for the first time. And not before, like the forlorn child in "The Doll's House," she had "seen the little lamp."

APPARENTLY I started something the other day when I said that the Sigma Chi could brag about Brother Booth Tarkington... The Phi Gamma Delta went into a huddle and sent me a list of Phi Gam authors... Let's see, now... There's Brother Charles A. Beard, Brother Stuart Chase, Brother Will Cuppy, Brother Vincent Sheean, Brother... oh, what's the use... But you know, I think they've got something there...

"THE BULLS OF SPRING," by Jake Falstaff, will be out on October 8... One of the poems is about a little housekeeper who "feels a dear well-being when she does the dishes, because of the smoothness of a china plate..." The next time I have to wash them I'll try to remember how poetic I look...

REMEMBER THE boy who took the part of Dennis Eady in "Ethan Frome"? He has just finished his first novel, called "Fine Flowers in the Valley"... I like these short titles... They're so easy to remember...

APPARENTLY THERE is something new under the sun, after all... Samuel McCarty, of this city, has had published what is probably the first and only book on the subject of automobile accident claims... The hero's name appears to be Res Ipsa Loquitor...

Tom McCarthy

Trekks Into Washington's Chinatown on the Trail of War News.

MAYBE THERE'S a logical explanation for it, but it's got me licked. I've stopped trying to figure it out. It's just one of those things.

Most reporters go down to Chinatown and get stories full of quotations from Hip Sing, Sam Wah and the others, but I have to come back whistling "I've Got Plenty of Nothing." I go down to the 600 block of H street all geared up to write a stirring chronicle about war clouds over Washington's Chinatown... and come back with the information that many Chinese musical instruments have only one string.

I still think that I might have placed those war clouds over H street, if only I'd gotten away to a better start. I spied an ancient Chinaman leaning against the wall, near the entrance to a Chinese shop. I rushed with all the fervor one can feel for the first interview of the night.

"This gentleman," thought I, "has the dignity and character of the Orient graven on every line of his ancient face. Certainly he will be able to tell me what is being thought and spoken of the war in his Homeland."

I CAME IN, as you might say, "wide open." I wasn't looking for a short job, but an emotional and dramatic reading. You wouldn't look for those things from such a dignified old gentleman. In reply to my question, he removed his pipe from his mouth just long enough to floor me. He said that he wasn't thinking or feeling anything!

Now, I hold that to be commendable candor, but it wasn't mine for dramatic reading. You can't print that. He didn't say in so many words that he was neither thinking nor feeling, but that was the substance of it. What he actually said was, "I walk along."

If he had been walking, it might have been all right. I might have tried again, thinking that he hadn't understood. But there was no getting around the fact that he was standing there with the still fixity of the "Rock of Ages."

"I walk along," he repeated. Then, not content with a statement which might leave itself open to interpretation, he added, "Many wars come—many wars go. They come and they go. I walk along."

He nodded sagely and, possibly as a result of autosuggestion, he ambled quietly down the street.

EVEN AFTER THAT, I think I might have recovered sufficiently to garnish the street with war clouds, had it not been for the orchestra. When the orchestra started in, it took the story right out of my ear, and made me stuff the "war clouds" back into my notebook to be held for future reference.

I obtained a lot of quotable material from George Moy, the smiling proprietor of a Chinatown restaurant. He showed me the buttons being sold through Chinatown for the relief of Chinese refugees. He told me that all Chinatown had contributed toward the relief of Chinese refugees, and he read extracts from the first issue of the "Chinese Student's Weekly," which is edited for English readers by Chinese students in Washington.

Sitting in George's little restaurant, I learned that a nationally known brand of cigarettes is being boycotted through Chinatown. No one was quite sure of the nature of the offense which merited the boycott, but they all assured me that some insult to the Chinese cause had been perpetrated on the cigarette company's radio program.

Later, out on the sidewalk, Stanley Moy pointed out the bulletin emblazoned in Cantonese script, which told of the progress of the war. To one side were the names of all residents who had contributed money for the aid of refugees.

Just about the time a new sidewalk acquaintance began to explain to me why 95 per cent of the residents of the section were from Canton, and few if any of them from the war-torn area around Shanghai, I began to relax. I felt that maybe I'd shaken off the jinx and that I was really going to get a war story. And then something happened. It was too late to knock on wood... and a moment later I was convinced that there was already too much wood-rapping going on right around me.

OUT OF THE basement room of the house before which we were standing came a crescendo of noise which could have been equaled only by a thousand games of table tennis played with sounding boards. As if that weren't enough, there followed the sound of falling tinware and a shriek.

My Chinese friend was still talking... or, at least, I could see that his lips were moving. "What's the noise?" I yelled, pointing to the basement.

"He cupped his hands and his lips framed words which never reached me."

I pulled myself together and let go with a top variety shout which should have been heard in Chevy Chase. "What's all the noise?" I roared. My Chinese friend heard me that time. For just as I gave "my all," the racket in the basement suddenly ceased and heads popped out of windows up and down the street to see who was yelling like that.

I was quite unconcerned about my shout, however. Quite at ease, I lit a cigarette, put the burnt match in my pocket and threw the pack away. The Chinese orchestra, my new acquaintance informed me, "They practice together. Man here from Chicago to teach them Chinese music. They never play much before."

I FELT there was a strong strain of the reasonable in my friend's statement to the effect that "they never play much before." I went down the steps into the basement to see what sort of regiment was housed there which could, at will, produce such sounds.

When I entered the little room, I found only four players and a dozen spectators. Stringed instruments hung from the wall, but the group rehearsing was content to spend the evening with brass cymbals large as ashcan covers, a gong and keg-like, wooden drums.

Suddenly the instructor gave a high, shrill moan and his sticks began to rattle on the wooden keg with machine-gun speed. Each with his own abandon, they attacked their instruments. The players with the kegs beat them in a spine-tingling staccato tempo and the man with the gong sent its brassy roar trembling through the room.

Just as the man with the ashcan covers prepared to add his bit, my newly made acquaintance of the street entered the room, grinning.

At that point, the man with the ashcan covers put everything into one mighty crash. Then it was everyone for himself, and don't spare the instruments. Gong, ashcan covers, wooden kegs and ashcan covers were shown no mercy as the players hammered, pounded, flailed and drummed.

"You like?" my friend shouted. Fumbling toward the door, I responded rather weakly: "I walk along."

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Justice Black's wild oats in the Alabama Klaverns have not only put the Klan back in the robe and fee business with a vengeance but have given the wags another whack at K. K. K. gags.

A Cabinet meeting was sitting overtime at the White House; some of the President's callers were getting restive.

"What's the trouble," demanded one of them, "can't the klabnet get its heads on?"

When the Roosevelt threw their first party at the White House, very large and very informal, they served ham sandwiches and coffee, and the caterer's bill was something like $330, to the horror of some of the thrifter members of the staff.

Someone figured out that for $330 they should have been able to make 14,000 ham sandwiches and 10,000 cups of coffee, right in the kitchen, instead of about one-tenth that much. Those were the last caterer's ham sandwiches; they're made at home now, right in the White House kitchen.

That uphill climb from the boat landing to Washington's Tomb and Mount Vernon puts the tourists in a reverent mood as nothing else would an American thing. The mood usually lasts until they see the bare blower chest of 14 1-gallon bottles which the general used to take along on his tedious coach journeys.

"Alice killed the League!"

Americans are notoriously bad linguists, and that's quite a handicap in Washington, where you encounter half a dozen lingo at every cocktail party and dinner.

In the large restaurants where the diplomats gather you often hear animated chatter in four or five tongues carried on between the tables, European pension style.

So official and social Washingtonians are pushovers for the language schools which flourish here, but with deplorable meager results. They pay the fee, play hooky from school, are too busy to study, and emerge with a few parrot phrases after buying a course and a stack of foreign language phonograph records. The best students are the American girls who marry foreign husbands and have to learn to talk to him and his friends on a natural.

A guest was asking Helen Woodruff about the rumor that her husband, the Secretary of War, would become Governor General of the Philippines.

"And how would you like Manila?" she asked.

The Woodruffs' small daughter, Melissa picked up her ears.

"Do you mean Manila ice cream?" she demanded earnestly.

As if a half holiday weren't enough, a Government clerk was heaping because Constitution Day isn't a full holiday.

"Why did the President make it only a half holiday?" he complained.

"Because he's only half for the Constitution!" commented an $1,800-a-year Tory.

Some of the more vindictive matrons in the opposition camp are using Mr. Roosevelt as a bogeyman to frighten their children. The tongues on the British Embassy lions stick out at the awed passersby on Massachusetts avenue.

Appropos of the new movie about Mme. Walenska and Napoleon, some one asked a handsome Washington matron if she would do a Walenska to save her country.

Drive Begun Against Tax
On ReceiptsTwo Groups Seek Repeal of Levy Adopted by Last Congress.

A drive to force removal of the tax on gross business receipts adopted during the last days of Congress was set in motion last night by two business groups, the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, and the Washington Branch of the National League of Wholesale Fish, Fruit and Vegetable Distributors.

Despite projected action of these groups, and protests from the Board of Trade, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen indicated yesterday that the Commissioners are planning to submit a $50,000,000 municipal budget for 1939 to the Budget Bureau, a $4,000,000 increase over the current budget.

The proposed 1939 budget anticipates the continuation of the 25-cent increase in the realty and personal property levy and of the tax on gross receipts.

Will Seek Refund.

To combat the continuance of the gross receipts tax, the Federation of Businessmen's Associations voted to organize a city-wide committee, including representatives from many business and civic groups, to ask for withdrawal of the tax and refund of payments made under the present law at the next session of Congress.

Several members of the federation suggested calling for volunteers to refuse payment of the tax and make a test case. J. Nelson Anderson, attorney, and chairman of the legislative committee of the federation, questioned the constitutionality of the tax, and suggested instances where it might be proved confiscatory and discriminatory.

Anderson was appointed chairman of a special committee, 10 of the 11 member attorneys, to investigate the legality of the tax.

Theodore S. Grape, president of the federation, was asked to name a committee of two men to send out a call to other business groups for a general meeting within two weeks for concerted action against the tax. He will announce the members of this committee today.

The federation delegated Joseph Batt to serve with representatives of eight other civic and trade groups on an advisory committee to the special committee of District officials studying the new tax.

Georgetown Protest.

The group also endorsed a resolution of the Georgetown Businessmen's Association protesting the tax as "unjust and confiscatory" and asking that the city "repeal the act and upon such repeal, to order the refund of any and all taxes that may have been paid thereunder."

Ross Garrett, guest speaker at the Federation meeting, discussed the difficulty of fixing responsibility for any District tax appropriation and said that the greatest responsibility was on the Federal Government, which had passed the law.

At the meeting of wholesale distributors, also held at the Hotel Hamilton, 150 members of the association met to discuss the support of other associations in the fight against the tax. R. D. Marshall, chairman of the association's subcommittee studying the tax, said they had not yet joined with the campaign of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations.

Marshall said his group would be in favor of a sales tax, rather than an income tax, as a possible substitute for the gross receipts tax. "If the gross receipts tax remains it will amount to a sales tax in the food and drug industry, because of the turnover is so large in comparison to net receipts that we will not be able to absorb the tax," he said.

Alternative Offered.

Earlier protests against increasing the District budget had come in a letter from E. F. Collier, president of the Board of Trade, suggesting to the District Commissioners that the District taxes be reduced as an alternative to the step-up in the budget.

District officials pointed out that the 1939 budget is bound to be at least $2,000,000 greater than 1938 because of current departmental expenses are reduced or water rent or taxes on motorists are cut.

The return of the water charges to normal and the imposition of motor vehicle weight taxes, both of which were effected by Congress last session, will provide this extra $2,000,000, regardless of proposed expenditures.

This $2,000,000 in water and highway fund revenue, added to the $2,000,000 anticipated increase in general revenue accounts for the proposed $4,000,000 jump in the total budget.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, said that he would ask Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal to draft legislation to give the Commissioners complete control of the District's finances.

Flares Light Way as 8,000 Masons Parade in Pageant
In Celebration of Constitutional SesquicentennialMany Diseases Held Mistaken
For LeukemiaD. C. Physician, Lecturer for Georgetown, Urges Careful Diagnosis.

Leukemia, the dread blood disease which strikes few but rarely tolerates a survival, was pictured here yesterday as an affliction which many another likes to imitate.

If recommendations voiced by Dr. H. A. Spiegel are heeded by fellow physicians, particularly pediatricians, they will use all means to determine whether another infection is causing the trouble before returning a positive diagnosis of leukemia.

Dr. Spiegel, a Washington practitioner, yesterday described his experiences in treating 19 genuine leukemia cases and several others misdiagnosed as such, in a lecture at the Georgetown Medical School post-graduate course. The morning session, devoted to children's ailments, was held at Children's Hospital.

Case Found Misdiagnosed.

One youngster was brought to Dr. Spiegel suffering, according to diagnostic tests, from leukemia. Thorough examination and a long period of surveillance disclosed that the case was one of simulating instead of leukemia, which results from an overabundance of the white cells.

Encouraging results in treating juvenile leukemia by autotransfusion, in which small amounts of the patient's own blood are transfused from the veins to the muscles, were reported by Dr. William F. O'Donnell. This form of treatment is not new but Dr. O'Donnell's practice of giving one comparatively large dose instead of many small ones in series represents a departure.

New Drug Successful.

A new testimonial to the efficacy of the newly developed drug sulphonamide was presented by Dr. Frank W. Goven, reporting on 64 children's cases treated by Dr. O'Donnell or himself. Prescribing the still mysterious compound in small dosages, they found that it apparently played a part in clearing up such unrelated diseases as acute tonsillitis, measles and scarlet fever.

Dr. John H. McLeod, discussing the relative merits of antiserum and antitoxin in treating meningitis in children, said he had found the latter to be particularly successful.

Pediatricians were urged to recognize the importance of psychology in handling their young patients in an address by Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene. The five-day Georgetown post-graduate course will end today, with morning and afternoon lecture sessions, at the medical school and morning clinics at Georgetown and Providence hospitals.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan declined to answer the Board of Trade's statement that its estimate of city finances had proved better than his own.

A parade of 8,000 master Masons last night heralded Washington's celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States.

Of the 39 men who, on September 17, 1787, signed that charter of American liberty, 21 belonged to the masonic fraternity, among them George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton and Robert Morris.

Last night's parade to commemorate their handiwork started at Thirtieth street and New York avenue, moved southward to Constitution avenue and west on that thoroughfare to Constitution Hall, where Senator Borah delivered his oration, and the crowd overflowed into Continental Hall adjoining it. Meantime 2,500,000 Masons were gathered in lodge halls throughout the country to hear the Lion of the Rockies.

Paul B. Cromelin, grand master of Masons in the District of Columbia, who presided, was introduced by Reuben A. Bogley, past grand master. The invocation was said by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington and chaplain of the Temple-Noyes Lodge.

Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, director general of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission and a member of Pacific Lodge, No. 238, and an honorary member of the Grand Lodge of the District, told of the important part that Masons played in the drafting of the Constitution and added:

"No one need ever fear that a faithful Mason will ever waver in his devotion to the Constitution."

Grand masters of Masons from the 13 original States read messages to the assemblage. They were Harry W. Lowe, of Delaware; Harold N. Rust, Pennsylvania; Harry E. Hutchinson, New Jersey; Robert McMillan, Georgia; Anders Jacobsen, Connecticut; Claude L. Allen, Massachusetts; Harry B. Wright, Maryland; Walter F. Going, South Carolina; Alexander Macintosh, New Hampshire; C. Vernon Eddy, Virginia; Jacob C. Kinck, New York; Watson N. Sherrod, North Carolina, and Chester M. Aldrich, Rhode Island.

Led by William Tyler Page, the author, the Masons recited "The American Creed" and then joined in singing "Faith of Our Fathers" and "America."

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. John C. Palmer, pastor of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, and grand chaplain of the grand lodge of the District.

Boys and girls who make "caution" their password in crossing streets and highways in Washington will be rewarded with certificates of membership in a safety organization, the Capital Safety Club, when they enter school next week.

Distribution of membership but-tons and certificates was planned yesterday after the Board of Education approved the plan for promotion among smaller school children. This safety campaign will be conducted among the boys and girls of the elementary grades, according to Gilbert Hahn, organizer of the club, who requested the board's approval.

Teachers will distribute the safety club certificates, each of which contains a list of safety warnings. Membership in the club means the pupil has pledged himself to live up to the following six rules: "I obey traffic signs and signals," "I cross only at regular crossings," "I stop, look and listen before crossing the street," "I am always careful going

Minimum Pay
Board to Study
Living Figures

The District Minimum Wage Board conference, holding its first meeting at the District Building last night, organized its nine members and instructed employer and employee representatives to gather cost-of-living figures to present at a meeting next Thursday night.

The meeting was a preliminary one to determine methods of organization and procedure. Only routine matters were considered and no final action was taken on any matter.

Present at the meeting were Mrs. William Kittle, District Minimum Wage Board chairman, and the board's other two members, John Hanna and Arthur L. Schoenthal. The nine members of the board conference are John J. Esch, Mrs. Gwen L. Swiggett and Mrs. S. O. Brock, all representing the public; John J. Hasley, Jacob Hemminger and Edwin Hahn, representing employers, and Miss Anna M. Thornhill, Mrs. Erna Ketchum and Mrs. A. E. Milstead, representing employees.

Program.

President Roosevelt will ride to the Washington Monument grounds tonight for the speech that will provide the Nation's celebration of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution with its principal attraction.

Last night Representative Sol Bloom, director of the Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, announced that such is the interest in tonight's festivities that it has been necessary to provide for 10,000 additional chairs in the Sylvan Theater.

"I feel there will be adequate seats for everyone who goes there to hear the address of the President," Bloom said.

The President's speech, which will be broadcast, is scheduled for 9:30 p. m., but an hour earlier the observance will get under way with the music of the Army Band and the singing of John Charles Thomas, Government employee who has been given a half-holiday to participate in the observances and at least one Government department has arranged a program of its own. The Interior Department Recreation Association yesterday announced a program of athletic events to start at 2 p. m. at Fort Hunt, Va., on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway.

Bloom, meanwhile, announced completion of plans for decoration of the George Washington tomb at Mount Vernon, starting at 11:30 a. m. Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, chief of staff for Gov. Peery of Virginia, will place the Governor's wreath at Mount Vernon. Colored residents of the District will observe the occasion in an afternoon and evening program at 929 U street.

Jews Hear Sachar.

Washington Jews marked the 150th anniversary of the Constitution last night with exercises at the Jewish Community Center.

Dr. Abram L. Sachar, professor of history at the University of Illinois, contrasted the values of modern governmental philosophies before the more than 800 persons who thronged the auditorium.

Dr. Sachar declared that democracy was on the defensive against the inroads of fascism and communism. He said that both fascism and communism must use force to obtain their objectives.

Dr. Sachar was introduced by Henry I. Quinn, president of the District Bar Association and member of the board of education. Quinn spoke on the religious freedom guaranteed by the Constitution.

The gathering was made colorful with pages dressed in the costumes of colonial dames. Dr. Abram Simon pronounced the invocation. Music was furnished by the United States Navy Band Orchestra.

Park Board
Adopts Flood Control PlanExperimental Project Approved for Watts Run Area.

Something, at last, is going to be done about the Capital's most obnoxious stream—Watts Run.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday decided, with full sanction of the District Commissioners, to launch an experimental project whose ultimate aim will be to eliminate the flood damage which the stream wreaks at frequent intervals in the far northeast corner of Washington.

Only last Sunday a story and pictures in The Post depicted Watts Run as a constant threat to the thousands of citizens who live in its valley and described the 15-year fight by individuals and civic groups to correct the condition in one way or another.

Yesterday, after many months of study, the planning commission finally was pledged District co-operation in carrying out the remedial plan it has long favored, namely, to convert as much of the affected area as possible into park land.

Cheaper Than Culvert.

As a starter, the planners will purchase a "sample" tract. Then it will be up to the District Government, which hopes to get a WPA allotment for the project, to clear the dwellings and other structures and begin improving the wash. Probably the office of National Capital Park will come into the picture also.

The approved experimental plan was described by John Nolen, Jr., the commission's director of planning, who pointed out that similar treatment of the entire area subject to Watts Run's frequent floods would be one-fourth as costly as constructing an adequate culvert to keep the stream within bounds.

As funds become available for land acquisition and construction, the commission hopes to extend the scheme, which is favored by citizens' groups. The flood zone is bounded, roughly by Forty-fourth and Sixty-first streets, Gault and Grant avenues.

New Zoning Act Drafted.

Discussing the proposed improvement, Nolen declared that zoning laws in many jurisdictions throughout the country prohibit the erection of dwellings on land subject to frequent overflows.

In this connection, the commission yesterday announced completion of work on the proposed zoning act for the District which is designed to replace the outmoded law of 1920 still in effect here.

Commission members voted to recommend that the Fourteenth and Upphams streets portion be being given up by the Tuberculosis Hospital, be utilized both for recreational and educational purposes.

Specifically, the planners endorsed a committee report urging that a new building to house Wilson Teachers College, which comes under the Board of Education, be erected on the south portion of the large tract and that the remaining land be turned into a recreation center.

The District Commissioner, Board of Education, National Capital Parks, Park and Planning Commission and Recreation Co-ordination Committee are represented on the group which reported to the planning agency.

The joint-use plan was favored unanimously by the committee members, Nolen said. Earlier in the day, at the outset of the commission's first meeting since July, Nolen reviewed major projects in which the planning body is interested; Secretary Thomas S. Settle outlined the status of proposed legislation and reported that about $800,000 is available for land purchases this fiscal year, and favorable action was taken on the priority of transforming the abandoned Sixteenth street reservoir into a play area.

Portugal Warns Of 'Formulae' As Bar to Peace

Lisbon and Athens Willing to Co-operate With Hull's 14-Point Plan.

Acknowledgment of the "inanity" of "intruding the solution of grave external problems to vague formulae" is the "first step" toward realization of world peace, Portugal has informed the United States in response to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's request July 16 for an expression of opinion upon his 14-point peace program.

The State Department yesterday made public the text of a note handed American diplomatic representatives at Lisbon, August 20, together with a similar reply from Greece in which the government of that country expresses willingness "to collaborate in a collective effort" toward "a normal economic situation in the world" provided such an effort were undertaken "within the framework of an international movement tending to re-establishment of a free play of economic factors as a whole."

The Portuguese statement, which attracted considerable interest because of the close co-operation of that country with Premier Mussolini of Italy, also contained a bitter attack on Soviet Russia.

"The declaration of the Secretary of State (Hull) did not omit," the note said, "what it termed one principal cause of world unrest, when Hull 'advised abstention of interference in the internal affairs of the other countries.' It added: 'This interference is conducted principally in the form of revolutionary agitation, since an historical tragedy elevated entire nations, poor and unhappy, to the high position of forerunner of the new social era and messiah of the highest and most sacred doctrine.' 'Unfortunately, as the Soviet mysticism is followed also by an economy and political value, which many have deemed it convenient to have on their side, it happens that here and there the natural reactions against the invasion have disappeared.'"

A curious note was struck in the document's reference to accumulation by some countries of "useless gold, the weight of which depresses still further their economy."

Roosevelt Greets Lehman at Lunch For 17 Governors

By the Associated Press.

A White House luncheon for 17 Governors brought President Roosevelt and Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, together yesterday for the first time since the latter struck at the Rooseveltian Supreme Court plan.

The New York Governor—who formerly was so intimate with the President that the latter dubbed him "my strong right arm"—described the meeting as "most friendly."

He said he shook hands with Mr. Roosevelt, but did not get a chance to talk with him privately.

Lehman's sharp denunciation of the court proposal was credited with contributing strongly to its eventual defeat.

Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey, who acted as spokesman for the Governors, said the President expressed willingness to aid in any efforts at co-ordination of State and Federal tax methods.

This was one of the subjects discussed at the Governors' conference at Atlantic City, N. J., earlier this week.

D. C. Rector Undecided On Accepting Bishopric

Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, was notified officially yesterday of his election as coadjutor bishop of the Central New York diocese. Dr. Hart plans to confer with the notification committee of the diocese during the general convention of the Episcopal Church next month in Cincinnati before deciding whether to accept the position.

HEYWOOD BROWN, who failed to renew his subscription to the Daily Worker, yesterday received this printed form-letter from them: "Dear Friend. We note that you have allowed your subscription to lapse. Heywood Brown, president of the American Newspaper Guild, said in a recent speech: 'It isn't so much that the American press represents big business. It IS big business.' So why not take a tip from a veteran newspaperman and subscribe to a newspaper which prints the news which the Capitalistic Press leaves out." . . . Brown renewed his subscription.

WHEN TALULLAH BARKHEAD flew to Alabama with John Emery, her husband-to-be, to prepare for the wedding ceremonies at the home of her father, Speaker Barkhead, they were greeted by the Speaker's wife, who is extremely fond of Talullah. . . . The actress, who felt somewhat cramped after flying more than a 1,000 miles, stepped out of the plane and was greeted by her step-mother. "How do I look?" Talullah asked. . . . "Well, sitting in a plane so long has creased your clothes," she was told, "and you probably haven't had any sleep. You look a bit tired, darling." . . . "Really?" Talu replied. "What shall I do?" . . . "Darling," Mrs. Barkhead pleaded, "do 'Camille'!"

"PETER ARNO wanted it kept a secret that he's producing a play," Ted Husing informs at El Morocco. "He marched into the Algonquin, accompanied by his lawyer, a script writer and a press agent, and still wonders how—from that—people guessed he's doing a play!"

"I JUST GOT a wire from my husband," Mrs. Chico Marx exhibits the 18 Club. "Look—it's on a 'Mother's Day Message Form.' It says: 'Darling, I miss Ben Bernie!'"

"Y'KNOW WILKIE'S in Hollywood," Mrs. Willie Mahoney, wife of the gag-writer, tells Estelle Taylor, Leon & Edna's. "He wrote me yesterday asking me to forward his Bible and his old flag file. He says in Hollywood he could use them both!" . . . "Dizzy Dean, who was on the Shell program, says that's the first time he enjoyed broadcasting," a radio official reports at the Cotton Club. "Dizzy told me: 'The other times they gave me lousy scripts full of strange words—words like "Determination" and "Ambition!"'"

WHEN JOHN ROOSEVELT returned from Europe he didn't complain to his father about the Cannes news story. Young John's complaint was of a different sort. . . . He insists that it's time he stops adhering to the family custom—wearing clothes handed down from his older brothers!

"WELL, THINGS are breaking," Oshins & Lessy elate. "We're being screen-tested this week by 20th Century." . . . I just had Joseph Spah on my program," Bob Ripley reports at Reuben's. "He's the con-artist, billed as 'Bendova,' who came over on the Hindenburg. He climbed out of the Zep's window, and in jumping did a somersault to break his fall. Well, he came to the studio on crutches, and everybody consoled him for the blisters on his hands. We all said: 'Poor guy, those blisters show he came close to burning to death.' Well—as a matter of fact—those blisters are from using the crutches!"

About the Showshops With Nelson B. Bell

the town, this should keep the theatergoing residents of Bethesda fairly well occupied with their not-at-home work.

So, despite its being "getaway day" with the trunks to pack and all that sort of thing—on top of four shows on the stage—who should pop in yesterday afternoon but Gracie Barrie, closing as the week's headliner at the Earle, with nice reports of her recent engagement at Saratoga. After three hit weeks at the spa, Gracie was about to depart for other pastures when importuned to resume her work at the swankiest spot in town. Her wardrobe having caught the train that she missed, the management bought her a new one and she stayed for the entire racing season. Incidentally, the bookies also paid off to the tune of about $300. Altogether, Gracie sort of likes Saratoga. But she likes Washington, too—and vice versa.

Fort Myer Troopers Near End of Journey

Dillsburg, Pa., Sept. 16 (AP)—Deep in the Cumberland Valley, 1,000 cavalrymen and field artillerymen from the Army post at Fort Myer, Va., slept in pup tents on a hilltop tonight, ready for the next to last leg of their 105-mile march to Indian town Gap.

Today's march brought them from the battlefield of Gettysburg to a knoll about a mile east of York Springs. Tomorrow's 28-mile hike will take them to Harrisburg, where they will stay overnight before continuing to the Pennsylvania National Guard reservation.

Picketing of 4 Maj. Gen. Davis D.C. Shoe Shops Expires at 71 Is Restrained In Hospital Here

Judge Reverses Decision; Pleads for 'Status Quo' Until NLRB Acts.

A preliminary injunction restraining the picketing of four shoe repair stores owned and operated by David and Ryman Zoslow was granted in District Court yesterday by Justice Jennings Bailey after testimony of a score of witnesses.

In handing down his decision, Justice Bailey said he hoped the case would remain in "status quo" until the National Labor Relations Board has had a chance to act.

Previously the plaintiff, the Washington Shoe Workers' Union, had obtained a preliminary injunction, later dissolved by Justice Bailey after complaint of attorneys representing the United Shoe Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate. The Zoslows contended their employees had resigned from the picketing organization and were members of the Washington union. They also asserted none of their employees were members of the picketing union, though some of them had resigned from it.

Judge Doyle Tells Of a Snowstorm In August on Trip

A snowstorm in August and jack-fish that bite the barbs off steel hooks were among the things which interested former Judge Michael M. Doyle in his recent trip to the convention of Cosmopolitan International at Saskatoon, Canada, according to his talk at yesterday's meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club. Judge Doyle was delegate from the local club and was elected judge advocate general of the international organization.

The people of the Saskatchewan district are more like those of the United States than residents of Canada, he said. Their ideas of government are greatly like our own and they keep up with affairs in the United States through our newspapers, which are widely read.

Cosmopolitan International, Judge Doyle said, is planning to branch out during the coming year and will attempt to establish a number of new clubs, particularly in the West.

4 Army Blimps To Be Given Navy

The Army's four nonrigid blimps, use of which has been found no longer practicable by the land forces, will be turned over to the Navy, the War Department announced yesterday.

The balloons range from 208,000 to 375,000 cubic feet in capacity. Three of them are now at Scott Field, Ill., and the other at Moffett Field, Calif.

Two factors especially have made the blimps impractical for use as scouts, War Department officials said. The mechanization of military units, thus increasing their mobility, has eliminated the necessity for this type of aerial scout, and, secondly, the small nonrigid airships are difficult to defend from antiaircraft fire.

Although the use of blimps has been abandoned, the Army will continue to make use of captive balloons.

Orders to create the four airships, which have been deflated about four months, have been issued, and they will be sent to Lakehurst, N. J., the Navy's lighter-than-air station, where they will be used for training purposes.

Saves a Life

CHARLES CLIFFORD.

Carrier for Post Saves Pal, Bitten By Poison Snake

Quick-witted action by a Washington Post carrier yesterday probably saved the life of his friend, Stanley Shenk, 18, who was bitten by a copperhead.

Charles Clifford, 18, the carrier, and Shenk, who both live at 408 Pine street, Silver Spring, were hunting minerals at the abandoned mica mine near Burnt Mills, Md., on Northwest Branch when Shenk was bitten just above the shoe.

Clifford utilized the training he received in first aid as a member of Boy Scout Troop 212 of the Baptist Church in Silver Spring and hurriedly twisted a tourniquet about the leg of Shenk. He took him to the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital at Takoma Park.

Shenk then was taken home, where he is under care of a private physician, who said he believed Shenk would recover. Hospital physicians said the tourniquet probably saved Shenk's life.

Self Sacrifice Rewarded.

Sarasota, Fla., Sept. 16 (AP)—James Smith, Negro, explained to a jury today he understood liquor taxes were used for old-age pensions in Florida and that he was "drinking to help the old folks." He was acquitted.

2 Officials Quit In Row on Tax Inquiry Method

Chief Revenue Counsel and Aide Object to Giving Publicity to Names.

Things came yesterday morning at the press conference of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Asked as to reports that Shafroth and Ryan had resigned, he confirmed them but was loath to discuss the matter in detail. He did, however, make it plain the resignations were due to the two men's disagreement with a matter of departmental policy.

Friend of Morgenthau.

He said Shafroth was a personal friend of his, and it was on recommendation of the Treasury head that he was appointed last December to succeed Robert E. Jackson, now assistant Attorney General. The Secretary expressed regret over the need for the resignation and said he admired Shafroth's courage and independence. The fact that Shafroth was in effect working under two "bosses," the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the office of Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury Department, had led to conjecture that the resignation might have been due to this situation. Asked whether Shafroth and Oliphant had disagreed, Morgenthau declared there were "no differences between individuals." He emphasized it was, rather, a matter of disagreement over "a policy I was trying to carry out."

Shafroth will return to the practice of law at Denver, Ryan, who formerly was judge of the Marion County Superior Court in Indiana, will return to Indianapolis.

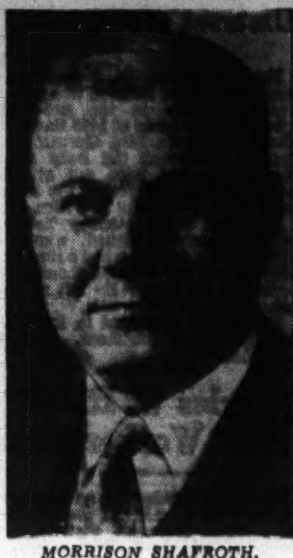

It was recalled, meanwhile, that it was Shafroth who called attention, in an address last March that "various plans of tax avoidance or evasion are being quietly advertised by laymen of one vocation or another to large taxpayers."

He warned that "all such schemes will be fought through this office and through the courts to the very end."

Evidence on numerous of these "schemes" was presented, not in the courts as Shafroth suggested, but before the joint Senate-House committee's investigation last summer, with much publicity, along with the names of wealthy persons who were said to have utilized the methods described.

Shafroth sat with Treasury officials at the Congressional hearings, but did not testify in presentation of the Treasury's case.

Shafroth is the son of John Shafroth, twice Governor of Colorado, and United States Senator. His family has long been prominent in Democratic politics in Colorado.

Shafroth himself has been a member of the Democratic State central committee, Democratic nominee for attorney general and for United States Senator, and also served in 1928 as temporary chairman of the party's State convention.

In leaving the Treasury, Shafroth joins the parade of others who have resigned because of lack of sympathy with Administration policies, though in his case the disagreement was over a matter of conduct, rather than on the manner of handling the Nation's finances.

Dean Acheson resigned as Undersecretary of the Treasury November 15, 1933, in protest against policies which he felt were undermining Government bonds which he was charged with offering to the public. Within a week Prof. O. M. W. Sprague quit as the Treasury's economic adviser.

Lewis W. Douglas stepped out as director of the budget August 31, 1934, and on January 17, 1936, Thomas Jefferson Coolidge offered his resignation.

Meanwhile, Secretary Morgenthau revealed at his press conference a proposed exchange of visits among Treasury officials in the countries within the Tri-Partite Agreement, reached by the United States, Britain and France last year with a view to preventing violent fluctuations in foreign exchange.

Sir Henry Phillips, Undersecretary of the Treasury in Great Britain, will arrive here next Monday, on Morgenthau's invitation.

that the nominee should be Gray, or someone similarly acceptable to him. Since the appointment is for a five-year term and the administrator is not removable at the will of the Secretary, Ilder points out that he prefers someone who will team with him.

Straus is definitely unacceptable to Ilder, particularly since Post-Straus' banker, violently opposed placing the U. S. H. A. under the Interior Department while lobbying for the bill in the last session of Congress.

Record Helps Ilder.

PWA officials privately pointed out last night that Ilder has never yet failed to get White House approval of any appointment he has vigorously pressed. They were sanguine that Gray will be named by Mr. Roosevelt.

Ilder fears that Straus represents "the New York crowd." During debate in the House and during committee hearings many small-town Southern and Western Representatives fought to slash from the bill what they termed "big-city favoritism."

Straus, Post, Morgenthau, Wagner and LaGuardia are all New Yorkers. Ilder has pointed out, accordingly, to informed sources.

The Cabinet rift over the job, as well as the sound and widely hailed record built here in New York, in Boston and in Pittsburgh by the unassuming Ilder has greatly enhanced his chances, it is believed.

Mrs. Roosevelt's part in the situation has been solely to bring Ilder to the attention of her husband, it was indicated. She became enthusiastic over Ilder when she watched his transformation of Washington slums and alleys into clean and attractive real estate developments for low-rent groups.

Forum Set Monday.

Ilder, meanwhile, moved to bring the whole housing matter to an immediate head with an invitation to more than 40 persons outstanding in the housing field to an open forum at the Interior Department Monday on the subject.

The guest list includes Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary Morgenthau, Senator Wagner, Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, and a host of other officials, including Gray, Nathan Straus, Langdon Post, John Ilder, Mayor LaGuardia and Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, and an even "darker horse" than Ilder for the post.

Thus everyone concerned in the struggle for the position will meet Monday to initiate the still-stalled housing program.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, also have been invited. Green accepted with pleasure last week. Last night, after he was informed Lewis now had been invited also, Green pleaded "a previous engagement," added "so sorry" and declined to attend.

Ilder's announcement said that "all shades" of opinion are to be represented at this meeting. Civic officials, Government representatives, State housing officials, real estate interests, building and loan company interests, representatives of the clergy, social students and numerous others are included in the exceptionally diverse group.

The President is not expected to make the appointment while in Washington this week, as he leaves for Hyde Park tomorrow. The post is one of the most important created in the New Deal, observers say, since upon the shoulders of the appointee will fall the entire burden of the national housing problem as outlined in the greatly ramified $500,000,000 housing act.

Further, it is the biggest attack yet made by the Administration on the housing problem, it was pointed out, and follows numerous failures to grapple at first hand with the problem. PWA officials believe that the Treasury influence and the "New York viewpoint" should definitely be eliminated from the housing field.

Since the housing failure came about through Peter Grimm, a Morgenthau-appointed Treasury official who later left the New Deal after struggling with the question.

Ilder's lifetime has been spent in battling for slum clearance. It was noted, and the world-wide esteem in which he is held was particularly noted when a British housing commission late in 1934 sought to have him journey to London at their expense to study their London slum-clearance program.

Since he had just been appointed to the local ADA, he refused, but the British commission, undaunted, crossed the Atlantic to present their plans to him here, so anxious were they for his judgment.

Boy Admits Killing Woman, 40, in Bed

Detroit, Sept. 16 (AP).—Police said tonight Robert Powleski, 15-year-old escaped mental patient, had confessed slaying Pauline Regal, 40, as she lay in her bed early today.

He admitted he crushed her skull with an iron bar when she caught him stealing 60 cents from her dresser, according to police.

having been accompanied by minor disorders. The primary arrests rose to 22, most of these held being accused of illegal voting.

There had been none of the usual after-the-struggle amenities, and just before the close of the polls Abraham Kaplan, Mahoney manager, had spoken bitterly of what he termed shabby campaign tactics by Copelandists. Copeland forces appeared similarly rancorous.

Smith Was New Derby.

The prize had been the probable control of the country's largest Democratic machine—by Roosevelt men or anti-Roosevelt men—and year in many years had there been here a Democratic family fight so bitter.

Alfred R. Smith, 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate, whose break with Mr. Roosevelt had become historic, spoke for Copeland in the campaign and exhibited a new brown derby as he voted.

Tammany Hall and the New Deal stood to gain or lose prestige in the city-wide primary election.

A sudden write-in movement for LaGuardia spun the campaign off on an unpredictable tangent during the final hours and left the outcome in doubt long after the polls closed at 8 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Voting had started at 2 o'clock in a welter of confusion.

Republicans were handed cherry-red ballots and left to choose between LaGuardia, who said he would stand or fall on his four-year record as a liberal, pro-New Deal fusionist mayor, and Senator Copeland, Tammany Democrat who battled the New Deal in Washington.

Farley, Mr. Roosevelt's political lieutenant No. 1, trying in this election to overwhelm the Tammany old guard, was on hand early to do his bit for Mahoney, and stepped back to let "Jerry" mark his ballot first.

Roosevelt Son's Divorced Wife To Marry Again

Elliott's First Spouse Engaged to Music Critic, 31.

By The Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Elizabeth Browning Donner Roosevelt, former wife of Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, is engaged to marry Curtin Winsor, of nearby Ardmore, son of a Philadelphia stock broker.

Their engagement was announced today by Mrs. Roosevelt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Donner, of Villanova, Pa. The marriage is expected to take place in two months.

Mrs. Roosevelt is 25 and Winsor is 31.

Mrs. Roosevelt recently returned from Europe where she spent the summer with her son, 4-year-old William Donner Roosevelt.

While staying at Salzburg, Austria, for the music festival, Mrs. Roosevelt and her son were visited by Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President; John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and his wife, the former Ethel duPont, of Wilmington, Del., who were spending their honeymoon abroad.

Since she divorced Elliott Roosevelt in Nevada in 1933, Mrs. Roosevelt has been living in the Philadelphia suburb near her parents' home.

Winsor is a student of music and has written criticism of musical events here. He attended St. George's school in Newport, R. I., and was graduated from Princeton University in 1927 and the law school of the University of Pennsylvania in 1930.

Torso Murder Suspect Tells of 'Good Times'

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 16 (AP).—Against the sordid background of a story of loose living, Oscar Bartolini today denied in court that he bludgeoned to death and then dismembered Mrs. Grayce Asquith. He testified to having numerous "good times" with the comely widow during the two months preceding her death, but said the last time he saw her was on September 18, two days before she was killed. Her legs and head were found drifting in Boston harbor in October.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Forget? Asks Girl Whose Faith Prohibits Her Marrying Divorced Man She Loves.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am one of the few women who never wanted to be married. I always thought of it as something I wasn't interested in. It isn't easy for me to learn to care about men. My home life wasn't happy, and it just never occurred to me that some day I might want to marry. I met a man much older than I and we were the best of pals for six years. Sometimes he would do something especially thoughtful and tender, but always insisted his feeling was paternal and, not having any experience, I thought it was.

Then he left town and the thought of never seeing him again was agony. He wanted to kiss me goodbye and I thought that would do no harm. But afterwards he kept writing me and through the letters and the tenderness expressed I grew to love him with a feeling I didn't realize was possible. And he, I am sure, felt the same.

But lately I have learned that he is a divorced man. Being a Catholic, my religion forbids me to marry a divorced man, so that the only thing to do is to give him up. But how can I? Some people can fall in love and then forget. But I, who had never known it was possible to care so much, realize that life without him would be unbearably empty. Is there any book I could read which will teach me to forget? What is the technique of forgetting?

Without him everything in life seems so tame, so dull, yet naturally I don't want to keep on caring more and more for him. It would lead to no good. People say, "Get over it," as though it were the simplest thing on earth. Maybe it is, for them, but it must be that they don't really care as I care. My spiritual adviser told me I should marry, yet the very thought of marriage to any other man seems sacrilegious. My only solution, as I see it, is to forget. But how can I? Somewhere in the world there must be someone who has come through such an experience successfully. Perhaps they—or you—can help me.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR M. S. The technique, if any, for forgetting a lost or forbidden love is to become interested in some other person or cause which absorbs the greater percentage of one's emotional energies. Much of the anguish and morbidity which result from being denied in love is due to the fact that in having no acceptable alternative channel through which to express, and no substitute object toward which to direct, one's emotional energy. There is very definitely such a thing as sublimating one's emotional drive, you know. Great poems, great music, great art have been wrought by persons who gave abstract expression to denied human love. Also, humanitarian endeavor, on scales both great and small, has been inspired by such a driving need to express what otherwise might have been disastrously pent-up emotion.

If you have never before been interested in men, no doubt you have led a rather secluded life, socially. The thing to do now, if you are convinced you have never been out of the question, is to force yourself to make other social contacts, and to strive diligently to find some worthy cause to which you can give your leisure time and strength wholeheartedly. Are you interested in world peace, national politics, the plight of underprivileged children, or the improvement of decent housing for the average citizen, in any phase of civic betterment? Are you interested in music, literature, painting—or have you any undeveloped talent along these or any other creative lines?

If marriage to any other man seems sacrilegious now, why not ask your spiritual adviser to suggest ways and means through which you may do social service work for and through the church. There is always work to be done for any church, on committees, with children, raising funds for this or that worthy objective, etc. Such work might bring you in contact with other men who, from the point of view of your church, are matrimonially eligible; and even if it doesn't, you may still learn the healing which comes of selfless work untriflingly done.

Remember that a person who, like yourself, has once learned how much and in what way it is possible to love, is thereafter more susceptible to the darts of Cupid. Perhaps your unhappily terminated association with this man may prove to have been only the preparation of ground for a more suitable, more enduring and infinitely more satisfying love. Remember that he would have loved, like he who would have friends, must keep an open mind and an open heart toward such an experience. You can't lock and bar the door of your heart against other comers, doing obeisance before a little dream, and expect ever to win through to adequate emotional happiness.

Incidentally, it is just possible there may be some way around the seeming impediment to your marriage with this man, if all the facts were known. I do not know how fully you have discussed the case with your spiritual adviser, but had you thought of consulting Miss Gertrude Madigan, 1312 Massachusetts avenue northwest, telephone NA-tional 1807? Miss Madigan, who will be glad to give you a confidential appointment, conducts a department similar to this for Catholic newspapers of the Nation, and she could—and would—consider your problem from the Catholic point of view. Why not talk with her? M. H.

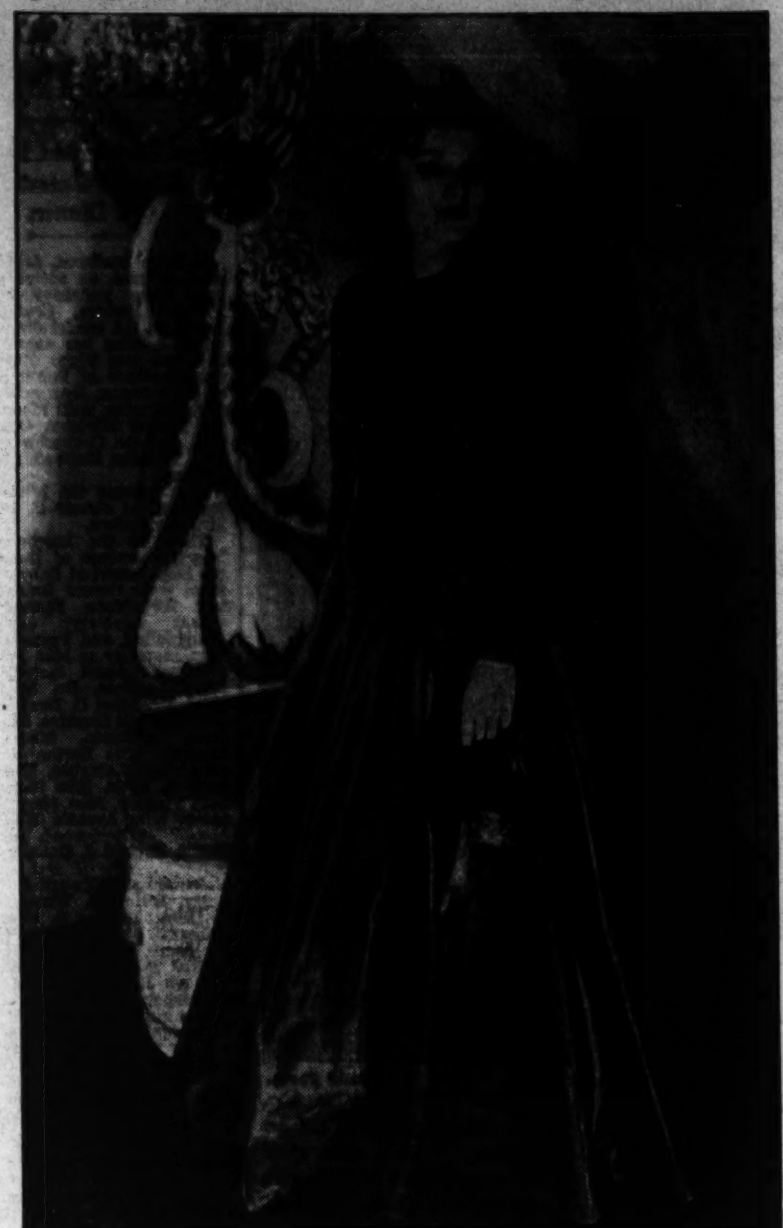

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Women's Vanity Theme Taken Up by Whitewing

Ravenna, Ohio (U.P.)—Nunzio Bivacqua, street sweeper, and self-schooled student of human nature, finds the vanity of women amusing.

"The young women!" he says. "They walk along these little side streets with their shoulders sagging and feet dragging. But when they reach Main street out comes a compact and they powder and primp and straighten up before stepping out where the whole town can see them!"

Spangled Taffeta for Evening Splendor

The Oriental influence is manifest in this striking taffeta costume consisting of metal brocade jacket and plain skirt. The spangled effect is repeated in the headpiece and in the handkerchief. The flaring floor-length skirt carries out one of the new evening silhouettes.

GLITTER—that first aid to glamour—will help many a woman escape the wallflower row this winter. Spangles are so predominant in evening attire that no one can help being noticed. They appear as trimmings, decorate headpieces and give sheen to fabrics. Not for decades have such rich looking brocades and metal cloths been used as materials.

Both for afternoon and evening the metal cloth jacket gives luxury and distinction to the ensemble. These little glittering jackets are longer than those of former years, are fitted at the waist and frequently have tight sleeves. They are combined with skirts of taffeta, velvet and other rich looking fabrics. Sequin embroidery on chiffon vies with a metal cloth as a popular fabric for the jackets.

For afternoon the blouse of luxurious fabrics gives an opulent note to the costume and is used as a first aid when that "dress-up look" is required. Fitted tunics of glittering material also are used to convert costumes into wear for afternoon, dinner or the theater and to wear over formal evening dress. Dinner dresses and evening wraps also run to the metal cloths and brocades.

The glittering embroidered fabrics are reminiscent of a King's court and are an outgrowth of the recent coronation splendor. There are whites and pastels shot with metal threads, moiré effects in sheer metal, upholstered stripes, rich Chinese colors worked into brocades, lacquer gold on taffeta, silver herringbone, leaf designs in both soft and crisp metals and all sorts of gold and silver embroidery. The metal effects even have invaded the daytime dresses, such as the wool jerseys, and there are glittering materials of a military style designed for tailored wear.

Bachelors Learn To Sew at School

If the average man becomes adept at sewing on missing buttons, darned socks and patching daintily instead of clumsily pulling strings to cover up holes they may become even shier of matrimony than in the past.

In order to aid the bachelor to perfect his darning a sewing school for men has lately been organized at the Barbizon-Plaza Hotel in New York by Mrs. Ruth Winick, a graduate of the University of California, who has established sewing schools for professional and business people in many American cities.

Mrs. Winick says: "Historians tell us that George Washington was an excellent sewer and knitter; Henry VIII and men in his court enjoyed knitting. The sewing school for men has a definite place in the scheme of life of the modern American man."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 16. THERE'S A NEW name today on our scroll of history—Mrs. Anna L. Farley, the first woman in this State to be chosen for jury duty under the shiny new law giving us a whack at justice and $5 a day. And they could not have made more fuss about it if Mrs. Farley had won the Irish sweep!

Reporters, photographers and cameramen crowded into the Farley apartment on the upper West Side to get a shot at Mrs. Farley, who is 44, dark, wife of a former political reporter and mother of a 13-year-old girl. The first potential jury woman in the book allowed that she had always been interested in such matters and that she was going to be a calm, deliberate juror.

Then she took a back-hander at an immortal feminine legend. "Woman's intuition!" she said. "Pooh, pooh! That's nothing but a bunch of men's hunches as good as women's." And that settles that, especially comforting to all male victims of our justly famed intuition!

Already 1,500 sisters have qualified for jury duty here, and Jury Commissioner Cahoon says that the great majority are housewives. Of course, they will have a new speech for father when he totters in after a hard day at office.

"How you suffer!" they'll snort at his piteous beeping. "What about me? How would you like to spend your whole day in a stuffy courtroom, listening to a lot of lawyers mumbaling and bumbling?" Father will probably say fine, and anyway, that speech won't produce any pork chops for dinner—as did the old-fashioned day spent over a hot stove!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Little by little the girls are cooing their way into key spots for the coming world's fair here. I found Kay Swift, one of our cleverest young composers, tucked away in a twenty-fourth floor office in the Empire State Building, writing some special music for the big show.

Oh, for the life of a reporter of matters feminine! Last Monday I covered, once over lightly, no fewer than five variegated fashion shows in the afternoon and evening, leaving me at midnight with a mind so befuddled by masses of new clothes that I didn't know a hemline from a primum!

Fats Must Be Taken Out of Diet if Reducing Is Desired.

One Extra Pat of Butter a Meal Adds Two Pounds a Month.

By Ida Jean Kain.

FAT IS THE food element you are going to cut in the reducing diet. Fats double your weight troubles. First, it is a scientific fact that body fat is stored more easily from food fat than from the other fuel foods. Secondly, one ounce of fat contains two and one-fourth times as many calories as the same amount of sugar, starch, or protein. In other words, one ounce of butter contains two and one-fourth times as many calories as one ounce of sugar. It's easily seen why mayonnaise, gravies and fats in any form boost the calories score.

To show you what fats do to your weight—just one pat of butter per meal makes you gain weight at the rate of two pounds per month, which is, roughly, 30 pounds a year. Of course, eating 300 calories of any fuel food more than you spend per day will cause this same gain, but it is easy to get more calories in fats.

Supply of Butter Needed. To reduce your weight just one pound per week, you will have to take 500 calories per day less than you expend, and elimination of fats is the easiest way of cutting the calories.

You need some butter in the diet since butter is a valuable source of vitamin A, but it is wise to restrict your fat intake in other forms. Put a strict limit on fat meat, oils, salad dressings and cream. Even in the low-calorie diet, you need one and one-half pats of butter per day.

If you have ever observed the food habits of people, you have found that the thin people prefer the simple foods while the overweight cannot seem to resist biscuits and gravy, sausages, pastries and butter on everything. You rarely see a thin person who likes the fat part of the meat, whereas the fat person always likes the fat with the lean.

In the long run, food habits are the basis of weight. In changing your food habits, it is well to start with the list of fats. You will never get very slim by taking potatoes and bread out of the diet, but leaving the fats in. The more fat a food contains, the more calories it contains in proportion to its weight. For example, four ounces of roast beef with the fat included yields 300 calories. By trimming away the fat you can have twice as much meat for the same number of calories.

Fats Prevent Hunger. There is only one trouble with deleting the fats from the diet, and that is appetite. Fats, being slower of digestion, keep you from being hungry, and an extremely low fat menu leaves you hungry a few hours after you have eaten. To overcome this difficulty with a mid-morning snack, such as a banana or cup of bullion, and in the afternoon have tea or sweetened beverage. This adds a few calories but nowhere near as many as would be avoided by fats in the regular menus.

It's a wise reducer who realizes that she can take twice as many calories out of her diet by avoiding fats as by leaving off any other food element.

Dancing Self-Taught

MEN flock to dance with a girl who's alive, buoyant—who doesn't have to be pushed around. How to have this airy grace that wins partners? A few evenings' practice at home—according to the instructions of a well-known teacher—will make you light of foot.

Begin by taking long backward steps. Learn to keep your weight on the forward foot until the ball of the other foot is firmly on the ground. Then when your partner dips in the Westchester or lango you don't lose your balance—or tumble about like the girl in the top sketch. You easily keep one leg a straight, graceful line, dip lightly with the other.

You have to be easy to lead, too, to be popular with the boys. So keep your weight off your heels in your backward steps. Dance sprightly on the balls of your feet. Hold your arms almost shoulder high, keep your head up!

Or do you stumble because you're not sure of the new steps? Learn the latest variations of the lango, the fox-trot, Waltz and rumba from diagrams. Practice at home until you can do them perfectly alone. You'll be a match for any partner.

Teen-Age Girls And Boy Beaux Need Chaperons

Picnics Require Supervision, Movies Don't, Suburban Mothers Told.

By Margaret Wallace

THE PROBLEM of the early-teen-age girl who is just beginning to think of boys as "beaux" was the subject of a get-together meeting of a group of suburban Washington mothers this week. These mothers compiled a letter on the difficulties they have in supervising the social activities of their early-teen-age daughters.

"Our daughters are beginning to regard the boys they play tennis, swim and go to the motion pictures with as beaux," the letter reads. "We never felt we had problems of etiquette in the daily games and pleasures of our daughters before. Now, however, we are confronted with such questions as the propriety of allowing our girls to go on picnics with boys of their own age or a little older without a chaperon. Recently some of the girls and boys wanted to motor in cars driven by boys all under 20 to a suburban picnic place and to remain away all day. The picnic spot is very rural and there is no supervision of any kind."

Movie Problem. "Another problem our group of mothers has had to consider is that of our daughters starting off for the neighborhood movies after dinner and lingering at the drug store or even a tea room nearby until after 11 o'clock with the boys they met at the motion pictures. I urged my daughters to bring their friends to our house for lemonade or ginger ale, and even offered to make ice cream, but they were frank in saying they preferred the drug store or tea room."

"At 11 o'clock one night I went after them and made them come home. They were very resentful, and said it was a shame. When the girls are with the boys at night, they walk arm in arm down the street and even stop on the front steps for what the young people describe as a 'little harmless pecking.' What do you think of such conduct?"

It is not considered good form for girls and boys of the teen-age to go off alone on picnics and parties. If they are still to be considered children, there is the element of safety involved; and if they are not considered as children, then they certainly need some older person with them.

Late Hours Inadvisable. The problem of the neighborhood movie is a difficult one for mothers to solve. The motion-picture house of today has become something of a meeting place and the center of the community life. Many mothers consider it good form to allow their teen-age or even younger children to go to the motion pictures at night alone. Many mothers also consider it quite proper for their daughters to be escorted to the motion pictures at night by some of their boy acquaintances. It would have to be a very prudent person, however, to raise the question of good form in a boy and girl stopping for ice cream or soda on their way home from the motion picture.

Una wears hers with a part on the left side, hanging straight to the shoulders, where the ends are turned under. Soft feather bangs give a softening touch to the forehead.

Marsyl Stokes to Make D. C. and London Debuts

Arrives Here Wednesday Following Coming-Out Season at Newport; Will Visit Father's Estate.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

With a successful coming-out season at Newport completed, a Capital debut in the offing, and a court presentation also planned for her—Miss Marsyl Stokes, "international debutante," will arrive next Wednesday at her father's estate near Annapolis for an extended visit.

Later, she will come to Washington to be with her grandmother, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, who will present her to Capital society in December. She will remain in this country until February, when she will sail for England to join her mother, Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff.

Her sister, Miss Vivian Stokes, who has been with Mrs. Fahnestock at Harrison House, Newport, since Mrs. Drummond-Wolff left some time ago, will sail this week-end for Liphook, England, where her mother and Mr. Drummond-Wolff will be through October.

From Wednesday until the latter part of next month, Miss Marsyl Stokes will spend most of her time at her father's estate, but according to present plans, she also will be in Warrenton, Va., for a few days and, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Stokes will go to New York for a brief visit.

Mother Made Debut Here

Tall, slim and unusually attractive, as is her mother, Miss Stokes will make her bow in the same Washington residence that was the scene of her mother's coming-out party. As Miss Margaret Fahnestock, Mrs. Drummond-Wolff was one of the most popular debutantes of the season in which she was presented. Remembered for her exquisite taste in dress, as well as her beauty, the former Miss Fahnestock made

A large luncheon, followed by a conference on social matters, was given yesterday by Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, in the official dining room which adjoins her office. Guest of honor was Viggo Christensen, Commissioner of Public Welfare of Copenhagen, Denmark, who is in Washington until Monday, and the Danish Minister, Otto Wadsted, and the Counselor of Legation, Wilhelm Eickhoff, also were present.

Last evening the Minister entertained at dinner in honor of Mr. Christensen.

Those at the luncheon were largely members of the staff of the Department of Labor. Among them were Gerard Reilly, solicitor; Richardson Saunders, assistant secretary; James L. Houghteling, and Frances Jurkovic, secretary to Miss Perkins.

Others present included Miss Mary LaDane, Dr. Martha M. Eliot, Dr. Ethel C. Dunham, Miss Isabelle Mott Hopkins, Miss Mary Irene Atkinson, Miss Naomi Deutsch, Miss Bertha Nienburg, Miss Anne Larrabee, Miss Elizabeth A. Hyde, Miss Mary Elizabeth Pidgeon, Miss Mary V. About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

"Liz" (Mrs. John Hay) Whitney was carefully non-committal as to her movie plans when pumped on the subject at the Shoreham Terrace last evening, but she left yesterday for her second trip to Hollywood.

There she will join her husband, Jock Whitney, angel of the Technicolor interests, among other things.

Since "Mrs. Jock" loves her Middleburg farm better than any of her other homes it may be assumed she is not going all the way to the West Coast just for fun. Perhaps those rumored plans for starting her in a society horse opera—instead of as Scarlet, heroine of that book—are at last materializing.

Currently her favorite dance tune is "Where Are You?" She requested Barnard of the Shoreham Band, to play it for her three times the other evening. Mrs. Whitney had with her on the Terrace a party of friends from the hunting country.

LIFE, FOR THE Attorney General, is just one thing after another these days. Congress kept Mr. Cummings here all summer when he had hoped to join his wife on a European holiday, and now this Hugo Black-Klan thing interrupts a perfectly good vacation at the Equinox House at Manchester, Vt. Mrs. Cummings loyally accompanied the Attorney General back to Washington, and they are once again at their home on Tilden street.

THE SCENE: Roof of the Washington Hotel. The time: The lunch hour yesterday. A large group of women are lunching together. Suddenly one of them looks at the doorway, jumps, and pokes the others. Simultaneously her companions crane their necks, blush and titter like school girls at the appearance of—no, not Robert Taylor, but—John L. Lewis.

NEWBOLD NOYES returned last evening from a vacation at his isolated Canadian camp. Mrs. Noyes, who came back from Canada earlier, went as far as

New York to meet him and they stopped at the Ambassador on Park avenue for a few days. Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss has left Merrywood for a visit in New York and is stopping at the Gotham while here. September 28 will see Mrs. Armistead Peter back at her historic Georgetown home from Cambridge, N. Y., where she spent the summer. After only a day or two here, however, she will return to Cambridge. Not until the middle of November will two other Georgetowners, Mr. and Mrs. L. Lamont Beane, return from a jaunt through Europe.

ROSE HYDE will be leaving next week for her last year at Sweetbriar College in Virginia. At present she has visiting her some Scottish friends she met last year at St. Andrews (the university, not the golf course). Mrs. Hyde only recently returned to Washington from a stay at Dixie Plantation, the home of her grandfather, Murphy Foster, one-time Governor of Louisiana.

NEW DEALERS and diplomats aren't the only popular bachelors who leave town—now a young newspaperman in our midst is about to depart. He is Billy Bell, who will leave shortly to work on a paper a friend of his owns in Greenville, Miss.

British Secretary Leaves Tomorrow On American Tour

The Honorable W. N. McG. Hogg, Third Secretary of the British Embassy, will leave tomorrow for a leisurely motor trip to "see the country." He will visit the West Coast and other places of interest before returning to Washington several weeks hence.

Mr. Hogg makes his home here at 84 Kalorama circle. He recently returned from a brief stay in New York, where he stopped at the Hotel New Weston.

Move to Shoreham. Col. and Mrs. Alexander Murray, who have been residing in Alexandria, have moved to the Shoreham, where they will remain until December when they plan to take a trip abroad.

Quality Furs Ready To Wear and Made To Order September Announcement

We do not have August Fur Sales. When we advertise the word "sale" we mean a clearance sale of old models which we have not sold during the season. In August all our models are new, likewise in September, therefore it is obvious we cannot hold a sale.

What we do is to price attractively our new collection of ready to wear furs during September, so as to stimulate sales during that month and give additional work to our makers before the rush work on custom orders for the Fall and Winter.

Convention Opened Here By Chi Sigma

Alpha Province Holding 3-Day Meeting at Mayflower.

Miss Lilly Jones, of Baltimore, Guest of Honor.

By Jessie Ash Asndt.

Chi Sigma Society which was founded in Washington 19 years ago and now has a membership of about 600 here, last night opened a three-day convention of Alpha Province embracing the chapters in the District. The meeting at which Miss Josephine Sullivan, province president and newly elected national treasurer of the society, is presiding, are being held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Lilly Marie Jones, of Baltimore, national president, is here as guest of honor at the convention. Miss Mary Lou Calliflow, of this city, who is national secretary, is another representative of the national board among the local members.

Mrs. Good
Conducts Service

A memorial service for the seven members of Alpha Province who have died during the year was conducted last night by Mrs. Louise Good, one of the founders of the organization. A candle was lighted in memory of each of the members while Mrs. Good paid a short tribute. Mrs. Good also played the violin, accompanied at the piano by Miss Ellen Hayes during the service.

The business meeting was devoted chiefly to reports of the past year's activities, read by the presidents or historians of the ten chapters in the province. The society originally was formed as a social organization only, but its members are now manifesting a growing interest in civic and philanthropic work. Last year a contribution to Glendale Hospital was one of its philanthropies.

Presidents of the chapters include Mrs. Julia Yokum, of Alpha; Miss Doris Judge, of Beta; Miss Constance Cooksey, of Gamma; Miss Lydia Monaghan, of Delta; Miss Genevieve Beaulieu, of Epsilon; Miss Helen Hayes, of Theta; Miss Helen McAnish, of Lambda; Mrs. Evelyn Stewart, of Alpha Omega; Miss Mary Elizabeth O'Connor, of Iota; and Miss Dorothy Luchetti, of Alpha Zeta.

Alpha Zeta is the newest chapter in the province, and was sponsored by Miss Miriam McCarty.

Retiring officers of Alpha Province include, in addition to Miss Sullivan, Miss Blanche Hall, vice president; Miss Virginia Jackson, secretary; Mrs. Elmer Early, treasurer; Mrs. Marjorie Metz, historian; and Miss Lenora Lester, social chairman.

Election Takes Place Tonight
Tonight there will be a business meeting, with election of officers at its close, and tomorrow night the new officers will be installed and will be guests of honor at a banquet and dance, which is to be the climax of the convention. A cocktail party Sunday afternoon in honor of the new officers will close the sessions.

The three women, in addition to Mrs. Good, who founded the society, are Mrs. Audrey Morris, Mrs. Christine Field and Miss Helen Healy. They also still reside in Washington, but have not been active in the organization for some years. Last year they were guests of honor at the annual banquet and have been invited to attend again this season.

Kappa Delta Alumnae Begins Fall Season

Preliminary to launching activities for the season, Miss Gwendolyn Fulmer, association president, yesterday appointed Katherine Ford, Annabelle McCullough and Louise Ogden Wright as members of an entertainment committee.

"Madame Chairman" ...

By Suzanne.

DAUGHTERS now follow in their mothers' footsteps in choosing their careers. Grace B. Stiles, an attorney and grand registrar of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal society, sent her young daughter, Caroline, off to Duke University this week and Caroline—unless she changes her mind within the next four years—will study law when she has completed her course there.

It was not until she was almost ready for high school that her mother enrolled in the Washington College of Law and received her degree in 1933. Mrs. Stiles now has her offices with George P. McCabe in the American Security Building. Her husband, George H. Stiles, one of the few husbands of lady lawyers here who are not also in the legal profession, is a civil engineer.

Caroline was graduated with honors last June from McKinley High School and received the American Legion award as the outstanding girl in the senior class in character, leadership, citizenship and scholarship. She is a member of the Phantoms Chapter of the National Honor Society at McKinley and Quill and Scroll, international honor society for high school journalists.

Mrs. J. E. Butterfield, of San Francisco, a past grand patron of the Order of the Eastern Star in California and also a member of the State park commission, is in the Capital for a few days, staying at the Dodge.

THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS, which had planned to have its first board meeting today, in deference to all the sesquicentennial celebrations, has postponed it until next Friday, when it will be held at Brookings Institution, with Mrs. Louis Ottenburg, the new president, in charge.

Plans for an active winter were discussed by members of the executive committee of the Curley Club last night at a meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roland J. Hyland.

THIS WEEK-END will be a festive one for the business girls of the Y. W. C. A. They will gather at the Baltimore "Y. W." camp, Pawcatuck, for a tri-city conference—Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis.

The girls who are going include, from the Blue Triangle Club, Sara Moley, the president; Peggy Cragg, who will lead a discussion group on "Training Club

Osteopath Body Reviews Plans For Convention

Women's Auxiliary Also Discusses Program for New Year.

The opening luncheon of the season was held yesterday by the Osteopathic Women's National Association Auxiliary at Collier Inn. Plans were discussed for the program for the coming year and also for entertaining the women doctors and the wives of members who will be here September 23 and 24 for the meeting of the Mid-Atlantic Osteopathic Association. A luncheon at the Ambassador Hotel on September 23 will be one of the social events of the convention.

Dr. Lucy Maxfield is president of the Washington branch of the Women's National Association Auxiliary; Dr. Bertha Crum, vice president and Dr. Florence Everhart, secretary-treasurer. Meeting this year will be held the second instead of the third Thursday of each month as they have been in previous seasons.

Speakers from other women's groups and social service agencies with which the auxiliary co-operates are invited to address the sessions. Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, who is chairman of program, presented to the group last year Miss Bessie Baker, director of Opportunity House; Miss Ella Mai Russell, professional social service worker representing the Women's Council of the Federation of Churches at the Juvenile Court; Mrs. Louis Ottenburg, president of the League of Women Voters, and other such women, outstanding in civic and educational work in the District. The auxiliary is especially interested in the Juvenile Court as Mrs. Howerton is chairman of that department for the Federation of Churches and, because of her interest, keeps the auxiliary members also closely in touch with it.

Representatives from organizations of which the late Miss Ellen Foster was long a valued member gathered at the First Congregational Church last night for memorial services in tribute to her. She was a member of that church, of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Abraham Lincoln Circle, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, W. C. T. U. and the Business Women's Council.

The Post's Football Guide Is Ready.

By Shirley Povich.

Tomorrow morning with your Washington Post (adv.) you'll receive a potent football package—the first Annual Post Football Review—a 20-page compendium of everything that concerns the 1937 football season, and if it does not make you want to grab a helmet and barge into a scrimmage you had better see a doctor about those missing red corpuscles.

Seems like football has come a long way since President Teddy Roosevelt threatened to put a stop to the brutal business which was making the boys at a great rate back in 1907. T. R. even called the prominent coaches to the White House then, you remember, and told 'em to tone down the game or he'd see to it that they wouldn't have any game to coach.

They did tone it down a bit, cutting out such brutal practices as the flying wedge and tackle-back affairs, but a bit later they introduced the forward pass and the game evolved from a test of brawn to a battle of speed and agility, and caught on something fierce with colleges and customers alike.

Well, it came to pass that for three months every year, football clamped a strange hold on the Nation's interest and folks who never got closer to college than the fourth grade suddenly began to rattle off dissertations on the Roome system, the double and single wing-backs and the potency of Warner's power plays.

That's why The Washington Post turned its sports staff loose on this football guide and in that 20-page section that will sell for a nickel AFTER tomorrow's regular edition, you'll find your favorite college's 1937 schedule, its record of last season, prospects for the coming campaign, its list of veterans and newcomers and, perhaps, a nice discussion of the Conference to which it happens to belong.

And The Post is introducing, too, a handy system of comparisons that will enable the football fan to appraise at a glance the chances of his favorite team next Saturday. It is the Litkenhouse System of Ratings, compiled without prejudice or bias, and aimed with all the accuracy of a mathematical reckoning, based as it is upon integral calculus.

There'll be pictures, too, and graphs and sketches, and a discussion of the season's most exciting and a section that deals exclusively with Washington's colleges. And it will give you an intimate glimpse of the Redskins, too. It'll be an awful handy thing, what with schedules for the season and everything, and it's free to tomorrow's Washington Post. After that, it'll be a real nickel. . . . The unforgettable thing to do would be to miss it.

The thrill of Tuffy Leemans' 65-yard run against the Eastern Col. was all stars last week left this department quite limp after the radio announcer had finished his thrilling description of Leemans' gallop, but on second thought I felt just a wee bit glib.

Leemans' run was undoubtedly all that the radio man said it was and there is no question of Leemans' speed on the gridiron, but the former G. W. U. back's scarcely as fast as the radio commentator pictured him on the gallop.

It was after catching a punt, you remember, that Leemans made his touchdowns dash and from that point, as near as I can remember, it was the announcer who said: "When he's asleep at night, he's fast asleep."

Well, you or I could not have walked across the room in the elapsed time between the radio description of Leemans' catch of the ball and his crossing of the goal line—it was rattled off that fast by the radio man who, obviously, was a full half minute behind the play, the old smoothie.

I asked him about it later—the radio man—and he maintained that Leemans was fast. "Why, man, you don't know how fast that Leemans is," he said with a wink. "When he's asleep at night, he's fast asleep."

Alexandria Boy On Yale Varsity

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 16.—Head Coach Ducky Pond today lined up a tentative first team composed of letter men. At right end, the berth vacated by the famed Larry Kelly, Coach Pond assigned Archibald Robinson Hoxton, Jr., of Alexandria, who is more and better known as Flick Hoxton. Pond has great hopes for the Alexandria youth who is only a junior. At left end the Yale mentor assigned Johnny Miller, of Columbus, Ohio. Pond will most likely try both out at opposite ends of the line, but unless a dark horse develops, Miller and Hoxton will start in Yale's opening game against Maine on October 2.

Al Simmons Gets 4 Hits; Wade Loser

Jimmy Wasdell Clouts Homer, DeShong Goes Route.

By Shirley Povich.

Disguised by his anemic 190 batting average, James Brooklyn DeShong turned slugger yesterday, bashed out two hits against the unwary Detroit Tigers and produced the winning run of a 7-6 victory for the Nats.

And it was well that DeShong was in a hitting mood, because his pitching was nothing to send the sparsely settled stands into paroxysms of delight. In fact, the customers were yelling for DeShong's removal when he pitched the Tigers right back into the ball game after the Nats had amassed a seemingly comfortable 5-0 lead for him.

But by the time the Tigers were done with DeShong in the fifth inning they had scored five runs and bounced to the front, 6 to 5, slaming out five straight hits that caused Manager Bucky Harris to send Monte Weaver to the warm-up reservation for a feverish workout. And then, like a guy who took the pledge, DeShong suddenly reformed his pitching. He held the Tigers scoreless after that fifth inning, giving up only three hits for the remainder of the distance. But he didn't reform in his hitting. He had already driven over two runs when he stepped to the plate in the seventh and delivered a single to rightfield that won the ball game.

Al Simmons was no drawback to the Nats. He pounded out four straight hits to figure in all of the Nats' scoring rallies and it was his single in the seventh that launched the winning uprising against Jake Wade in the seventh. A pair of infield outs put the decisive run in scoring position and then it was that DeShong delivered.

Young Jimmy Wasdell was not exactly any aid or comfort to the enemy, either. Because it was a climax blow by the rookie first baseman, a powerful home run drive over the rightfield wall with Stone on base in the third inning, that produced two of the four runs the Nats scored in the third inning when they emerged with their 5-0 lead.

DeShong, despite the 14 hits he allowed, remained upright through it all while the Tigers were using four pitchers—Roxie Lawson, George Coffman, Jake Wade and Baron Poffenberger, who surrendered 14 hits to the Nats.

DeShong drove in the first run of the day in the second inning after Simmons had beaten out a hit to Rogell, but the Nats really assaulted Lawson in the third when Travis drove off with a single to left. Stone drove a triple to center, and Wade, and Wasdell poked his major league home run over the high wall in right. Simmons later drove a single to center, which was converted into the fifth run of the inning when DeShong scored him from third with a fly to White.

Two old Washington employees then began to plague the Nats and DeShong. First Cliff Bolton, who had been in the fourth and batted a double to right center that scored the Tigers' first run in the next inning. Then a single to center by Pinch Hitter Goose Goslin that drove over the tying tally. That five-run uprising by the Tigers in the fifth wasn't at the fault of DeShong's pitching. Buddy Lewis muffed a tolerably easy ball at third base and DeShong, himself, breathed new life into the rally by dropping a throw from Wasdell to first base. Rogell drove over two of the runs with a single to right. Goslin's hit produced the tying tally and an infield out put the Tigers in front, 6-5.

Buddy Lewis and Johnny Stone were the guys who put the Nats back in the ball game in the sixth.

'It Was Some Party!' Say Redskin Gridmen

Local Grid Mercenaries Make It a Tough Evening for the Visitors—Tuffy Leemans Is Still the Town's Most Popular Grid Hero.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

It was some coming out party the Redskins threw last night in the maza glow of Griffith Stadium, and a good time was had by all—all but the guests of honor, the New York Giants, who probably have a terrific hangover this morning as well as their first league defeat of the season.

In party parlance, the Giants failed to "pin on the donkey's tail." What actually happened, however, was that they failed to check Riley Smith, Sammy Baugh, Charlie Malone and a few other Tribesmen. Handicuffs evidently are the only things capable of rendering sharp-shooting Sammy null and void for the evening, while a ball and ankle-chain would have been more appropriate for the gentleman from Alabama. When Sammy wasn't heaving passes, Smith was kicking field goals or running for a touchdown. It was all very bewildering to the visitors.

Baugh, heretofore just another 42-point roman head in The Post's banner line, wormed his way into the affections of those 24,000 fans who witnessed last night's contest by his arrow-like passes. You could hear 'em gritting their teeth and see them biting their nails when a receiver dropped a pass, but when they connected . . . well, the ovation was almost as great as the customers gave Tuffy Leemans when he trotted on the field.

Leemans Was In It!

Even before Tuffy's name was announced they started hollering, and when the spotlight finally picked him up under the goal posts, on the first-base line, the din was terrific, to coin a phrase. Leemans, still the most popular football player among local fans, didn't let the folks down, either, for the 72 yards he picked up on 11 tries before turning an ankle, represented the best bit of individual totin' of the evening. It may be heresy, but this writer thinks it just as well he was forced to leave the game.

But before Samuel quit pegging that leather around the let he had some of Tuffy's constituents comparing the two and giving Baugh at least an even break in the matter. The only thing he didn't do was the "Big Apple," but he really threw it.

A few professional rules that differ from the college code had to be explained to the patrons early in the game. They included roughing the passer, not only permitted but encouraged, and getting up and running again, or trying to, after being knocked down. Leemans invited disaster by getting up and paid the penalty. They are permitted to use everything, it seems, but blackjacks.

The freak play of the evening was a forward-reverse, intercepted, pass. The pass, fired (and I'm not trying to be fancy when I use that word) by Leemans and intended for Burnett, missed the mark, struck Baugh squarely on his chest, and in the same motion rebounded about 12 yards into the arms of the amazed Mel Hein, who succeeded in holding it. The net gain was 8 yards.

Espey Touch Noted.

The rare old publicity hand of Jack Espey, Redskin general manager, was apparent on the proceedings even before the opening kickoff. He gave the fans everything but a ride on the merry-go-round, and that's probably on next week's bill. A swing band, corps of Indians with tom-toms, spotlight introduction of players, and top-ranking tenor were Espey's offerings. The tenor, Joey Nash, a premier radio artist, was excellent. Espey introduced him and acted as master of ceremonies.

A feature of the evening was the "Spirit of the Redskins," a pretty feminine rider on a pinto pony, just as a badly beaten Defoe staggered to his feet after his sixth knockout.

The moral of the game probably is don't play a laundryman's team; you get a rough-dry finish every time.

Grid Schedule Set.

Tunnel, W. Va., Sept. 16.—Coach William Jackson, of Tunnel High School, has announced the following football schedule: September 24, Maestown, away; October 1, open; October 8, Rowlesburg, away; October 15, Kingwood, away; October 22, Newburg, home; October 29, Terra Alta, home; November 5, Thomas, home.

Smith's 60-yd. Run Decides in Thriller

Capital Back Intercepts Pass in Final Period; Kicks 2 Field Goals; Invaders Held on Goal Line; Baugh Important Factor.

By Shirley Povich.

Big league football and 24,492 customers came to Griffith Stadium last night. So did Riley Smith.

And when handsome Riley Smith, Alabama '35, had performed all his various chores for the Washington Redskins, the newly-adopted Capital entry in the National Football League was the decisive victor over New York's Giants.

The score was: Redskins, 13; Giants, 3. Or more properly put, it reads: Riley Smith, 13; Giants, 3. Because it was Riley Smith who produced every Redskin point, the entire 13, the whole kit and caboodle of 'em, honest.

It was no less than a scoring binge by big, 200-pound Riley Smith last evening as he made-to-order night brought out the huge throng, come to star-gaze at Baugh, at Leemans, at Danowski, Milner, Edwards and Hein. With deft toes and hands and a streaky change of pace when the need arose, the comparatively unheralded Smith projected himself full into the spotlight of last night's scene to win the game for Washington.

Smith's Big Night.

Here's what he did and now perhaps, you'll pardon my exuberance: He kicked a field goal in the first quarter of the 18-yard line to lift the Redskins into a 3-0 lead. And in the fourth quarter, he dropped back to the 18-yard line at the other end of the field he place-kicked an other field goal to break a 3-3 tie. And then—

When Giant passes were flooding the brilliantly-lighted field in a last desperate attempt that threatened to snatch victory away from the Redskins, Riley Smith turned their own weapon against the New York behemoths, snatched a Giant pass on his own 40-yard line and streaked 60 yards down the sidelines for the only touchdown of the night.

Sure, he kicked the point after that touchdown, too. He was something to see tonight, this quarter-back who joined the Redskins fresh from his Rose Bowl triumphs.

Thrilled to Smith.

To Riley Smith the 24,492 thrilled almost from the moment that Jesse Jones, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, had splashed the opening ball out onto the field to launch a carnival night for Washington football fans; but there were others who had their moments during that 60 minutes of football played to the hilt.

There was Slingin' Sammy Baugh, putting his college reputation squarely on the spot and justifying every advance notice with his magnificent forward-passing barrage against the Giants. And there was Tuffy Leemans, home to the scene of his college triumphs as a full-fledged star of the Giants. And there was Big Turk Edwards, battering through the Giants line and Irwin slashing his way through the tackle openings and Ed Danowski attempting gallantly, but vainly, to match the passing of Baugh.

No touchdown pass from the throwing hand of Baugh but glory fairly dripped from the team, lane Texas kid who was a marked man tonight but made the transition from the college gridiron to professional ranks with a tremendous thump.

It was Baugh's superb passing to Charlie Malone, to Wayne Miller and to Bob McChesney—that set the Giants back on their heels in that fourth quarter and put the Redskins in position for that breaking placement by Riley Smith and when the battle was over it was an amazing remnant that Baugh had compiled with his passes.

Dropped His Passes.

Sixteen of them he had thrown, and eleven times he had found a receiver. On three occasions he pitched the ball directly into the paws of a waiting but errant colleague who dropped the ball. His passes netted the Redskins 115 yards compared to the 60 the Giants amassed from Danowski's six successful passes in 11 attempts.

But Leemans—the Giants lost, but Leemans didn't fail. When the limping form of George Washington's Tuffy passed to the sidelines late in the second quarter—an ankle in the second quarter—the Giants were painfully turned—the Giants were beaten. Never to return to that ball game, Leemans watched from the

Defoe Kayoed By Armstrong

New York, Sept. 16 (AP)—Henry Armstrong, sensational Los Angeles Negro featherweight, continued his sweep through the East tonight with a four-round knockout of Johnny Defoe, of New York, before 10,000 customers in Madison Square Garden. Armstrong weighed 132½ and Defoe, 127½.

Billed as a ten-rounder, the fight was stopped by Referee Johnny McAvoy after 1:12 of the fourth, just as a badly beaten Defoe staggered to his feet after his sixth knockout.

The New Yorker was bleeding from a cut over the right eye and clearly was in no shape to further withstand the rapid-fire, two-fisted assault of Al Jolson's protégé.

Armstrong's piledriving rights and left sent Defoe crashing to the canvas three times in the second heat, twice in the third and once in the abbreviated fourth.

Barney Welsh Outcasses Davie Johnsen in Playground Tennis Match

Barney Wins From Davie By 6-1, 6-2

Lynch, Latona Reach Semifinals; Boke Farrin Tied.

By Bob Garrison.

Ambition and potential greatness bowed to experience and confidence yesterday when Davie Johnsen, the last junior to survive, fell before the accurate strokes of Barney Welsh, top-seeded entry and defending champion of the Playground Department's annual fall tennis tournament on the Potomac Park courts, in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2.

Having reached the quarter final round by the grace of a straight set victory over Ricky Willis, the No. 8 seed, Johnsen's game has aroused followers of local tournament play to predict a great future for him, did himself proud, however, as he rallied with his poised opponent in both sets, only to lose as Welsh smashed placements past him throughout the match.

Welsh reached the semifinal round when he will meet the winner of the Bill Breece-Lieut. James Farrin match which was stopped by darkness after each had won a set, 6-4. Breece, the former Harvard star, bled through the first set, but dropped the second set when Farrin kept the ball in play and avoided errors by the identical score.

Play Today.

They are scheduled to play off the match this afternoon before the semifinals events which are listed at 3 o'clock to be followed by the doubles semifinals.

Tony Latona and Hugh Lynch were the others to climb into the select round of four. Latona had his hands full with Ed Mather, who rallied to win the second set after nearly taking the opening one. The match ended, however, when Latona ran his opponent into submission, to win the last set in a rout, and the match, 7-5, 6-8, 6-1.

By Rittenberg, after several weeks' lay-off from competition, failed to trouble Hugh Lynch, No. 2 seeded entry, who trounced him after a good first set, 6-8, 6-8. Lynch found Rittenberg hard to pass in the opening set, but in the second set the former Princeton ace smashed his way through six straight games.

Today's schedule, which precedes the single finals tomorrow, includes both singles and double semifinals. Beginning at 3 p. m., the singles match between Latona and Lynch will open play, to be followed in order by the Welsh vs. winner of the Breece-Farrin match, which will be determined in the morning, and the doubles.

Welsh and Ralph McElvenny, No. 1 seeded team will oppose Davie Johnsen and Hugh Lynch, surprise team of the tourney, and Farrin and Lieut. Bill Howard will battle with Breece and Latona for the right to play for the championship.

Big Sailboat Fleet Forms For Regatta

By Daniel F. Craig.

With sailboats pouring in from North and South along the entire Atlantic seaboard, the largest fleet of windmillers in the history of the President's Cup Regatta will assemble off Hains Point Saturday afternoon.

Officials of the Potomac River Sailing Association have received 120 entries with the assurance that a large number of last-minute arrivals will swell the list to more than 150.

Some 65 sailboats, the biggest flotilla of local craft ever to compete on the Potomac River, were to be increased by a record out-of-town gathering that included small boat enthusiasts from as far distant as Jacksonville, Fla.; Elizabeth, N. J.; Rosford, Ohio, and Glen Cove, N. Y.

They are assembling at Corinthian and Capital Yacht clubs in preparation for the firing gun from the Coast Guard committee boat in the Georgetown Channel Saturday afternoon. Rival skippers will sail their craft over a V-shaped course around Hains Point for two laps, a total of 10 miles. Eleven classes were scheduled for a single race Saturday with two more on Sunday.

By far the largest single class is the comets. Twenty-nine of these trim 16-foot, one-design sloops will cross the starting line with the gun, 20 of them owned and skippered by Washingtonians. Stars of this class who were expected in by Saturday were Alton O'Brien, from Perth Amboy, N. J., national champion, with his Aquila and winner of the President's Cup Regatta last year; Don Diabolo, piloted by O. C. Keller, from Rosford, Ohio, who has the distinction of coming the greatest distance to compete, and Edna, from Oxford, Md., skippered by 12-year-old Reeves Hicks.

Time Out!

Sorry, Admiral, s'pose I should have yelled "Fore" when I dropped the anchor.

All football fans will want a copy of The Post's 1937 Football Guide section with all editions of The Post tomorrow at no additional cost.

Post Notes on Fishin' . . . By Bill Ackerman

Southern Maryland, noted far and near for not only the delicacies taken from the waters of bay and river, but equally well for the manner in which they are prepared, has devised a new way in which visitors may enjoy the catching as well as the eating of these fishes.

The Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair held annually at some point on the bay, in the month of Chesapeake, is just a grand get-together that sets aside two days for fun and feasting to get outsiders acquainted with the country, its customs and its people.

Held last year at Tilghmans Island, on the Eastern Shore, this year's festivities and crab-feasting will be at Solomons Island, in the mouth of the Patuxent, starting tomorrow at dawn with a shot from the Coast Guard Cutter Apache and continuing through Sunday.

Every one of the 21 State conservation patrol boats will be on the more than 80 square miles of Fair Grounds to aid and assist visiting boats in registering, which by the way is a necessity, but extremely simple, for no matter from which direction you may arrive there will be a boat flying a lettered pennant, if it is by water and if otherwise there are booths at many points on the island.

This accomplished, and you will be in possession of an officially numbered orange button that gives you the right to compete for any or all of the many fine trophies that will be awarded, not only for the largest fish of the recognized food fish, but for odd ones as well. Even the low-

Philadelphia, Sept. 16.—Showing the form that enabled him to win 15 games last year, Harry Kelley pitched and battled the Athletics to a 4-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns today.

Kelley held the visitors to six hits and would have had a shutout, but for an error by Newsum in the third that paved the way for three unearned runs.

Kain and Band Score a Hit at Wardman Park

Youthful Leader's Work Stirs Comment; New Club to Open.

By Chanticleer

Paul Kain and his orchestra are at Wardman Park for the fall winter season. And a versatile band it is—just seven members, but representing a mastery of more than 30 instruments. Each member plays at least three instruments and each is a solo star.

Guests of the Metronome Room already are commenting on the young maestro. He manages to get more music out of orthodox instruments than you'd think humanly possible. Some of the customers swear he must have a young symphony!

Paul is partial to the reed instruments. He plays every member of the reed family.

Those post cards always available to guests at the Mayfair sometimes provide the bases for mysteries. Last week a guest left one behind with a strange map on it. Every one has studied it and the final decision was that it was merely showing the visitor to Washington how to get from one point to another. The Mayfair post cards are for mailing, however, not for fun.

What a crowd and what a spot! Meaning that the Anchor Room in the Annapolis Hotel now is open and everyone in town, excluding perhaps Mr. Roosevelt himself, was on hand for the debut.

Scheduled for a formal opening later this month is the Bamboo Gardens, up on the site of the La Paroie. Behind the project are some folk who believe the time has come for a little competition in the nightery business and they intend to get a fast pace. Waiting for the opening, at the site of the La Paroie—to be known as Bamboo Gardens. Jimmie Santmyer is playing now at Maryland Club Gardens. Yes, the Santmyers family will be streaking out to Mrs. Stamm's lovely suburban spot these fall evenings, and for chicken dinners.

"His of Broadway" comes to the Lotus to open the fall season, with Earl Lindsay's revues. Lindsay, a welcome treat. Eight talented misses form the ensemble. Al Norton does the introducing and Bill Strickland and his orchestra play for your dancing. The show shows daily.

Should mention that another opening is set for the end of the month—at the Raleigh. The Rev. J. H. Kendis, now playing at the swank spot, the Stork Club, in New York, as the opening bandman. The date is September 30.

So long as these lovely fall days remain the Terrace at the Shoreham will remain open. With the first sharp cold nights the scene will move inside to the new blue room.

Elsewhere on this page is shown a view of the Big Apple that now is going on each and every Friday night at Boulevard Farms, just a short space down the boulevard below.

Much has been said of that smart rendezvous down in the Southeast where folk come in and have a good time and take their back hair down and just be natural. It's Brinkley's we're talking about. The address is 553 Eighth street southeast.

Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

To put all of one's eggs in one basket is just as short-sighted in Bridge as it is in other activities. The essence of good play is to preserve alternative chances. The hand shown below is a type that recurs again and again. The correct play is not at all difficult but, I regret to report, is all too rarely seen.

South dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

♥ A 4 3
♦ 10 9 4
♣ A 5 3

North
♠ 10 8
♥ K J 8 3 2
♦ K Q 9 2
♣ A K Q 3

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

North was somewhat up against it for a good response to the opening bid. He was decidedly too weak for two notrump and apparently thought that he was too strong for one notrump, hence compromised on a single raise. As a matter of fact, one notrump would have been a better response. South, it should be noted, allowed leeway for a shaded raise on North's part; instead of making an abrupt jump, he raised to the exact nature of North's raise, by a game suggestion. North, with two Aces and three trumps, naturally went on to game. West opened the club Jack, which was allowed to hold. East signalled with the nine-spot. The club continuation was taken with dummy's Ace. The outstanding trumps were drawn, and declarer then tried to break the heart suit 3-3. The 4-2 break obtaining, however, declarer was forced to lose two heart tricks and two clubs. At the same time, to provide against the more likely uneven breaks. The correct technique is to lay down only one trump, and then to duck a heart. The opponents can cash another club, but declarer must control the next return and, after drawing exactly one more trump, should test the heart suit by leading low to the Ace and back to the King. If the hoped-for 3-3 break exists, both opponents will have to follow; if it does not, there is a distinct chance that the defender who is out of hearts will also be out of trumps. In that case it is a simple matter for declarer to ruff his fourth heart in dummy and then to pick up the one outstanding trump.

Business Help Asked in Drive For Red Cross

Edgar Morris Chosen Chairman of Campaign Committee.

Plans for obtaining the co-operation of Washington business houses to enroll members of the District Chapter of the Red Cross were announced last night by Edgar Morris, newly appointed chairman of the general business group of the Red Cross Roll Call.

Morris, whose appointment was made public yesterday by Marcy L. Sperry, general chairman of the drive, said he felt confident his group will be able to enroll a large proportion of the roll call quota of 75,000.

Vice Chairmen for solicitation of businesses of 15 or more employees are E. A. Nash, Corcoran Thom, Jr., O. H. Ritenour and Robert W. Davis. Business of less than 15 employees will be in charge of Theodore S. Grape and Ford E. Young.

The following will have charge of the roll call in their districts: Louis F. Frick, H. J. Smith, John Fleming, Dr. E. C. Snyder, John T. Fowler, Fairfax Oyster, R. A. Levitan, Hugh V. Keiser and Louis I. Obergh.

Apartment house dwellers will be enrolled by a unit headed by Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, wife of Admiral Grayson, National Red Cross chairman, who announced plans for her portion of the drive last night.

Rather than a personal canvass of all apartment dwellers, Mrs. Grayson has decided to distribute letters with enrollment blanks enclosed for return to unit captains.

Assisting Mrs. Grayson will be Mrs. James E. McClintock and Mrs. E. G. Montgomery, serving as vice chairmen.

Yeggs Seize $400 And Miss $200 In Golf Club Safe

Washington safecrackers, moving their scene of operations into the swanky Burning Tree Golf Club, made off with about $400, but overlooked $200, Montgomery County police said yesterday.

The club, playground of Supreme Court justices and Senators, was not guarded at night, according to police. Julian Thomas, manager, discovered the robbery at 6:50 a. m. Police said they obtained fingerprints.

Montgomery police are sure the same robbers who have been blamed for the robbery of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, were responsible for the Burning Tree raid.

The robbers removed the club safe to a woods down the road, where they forced the door. They overlooked four $50 bills in a small compartment.

Corn Squeeze Jumps Prices 5 Cents in Day

Uncompleted September Contracts Estimated at 15 Million Bushels.

By the Associated Press.
Chicago, Sept. 16.—Running up like wildfire today, the price of September delivery of corn scored a maximum overnight gain of 5 cents a bushel.

Acute anxiety to purchase reached a climax in last-minute hurried dealings that shot September corn quotations skyward to $1.10 1/2, as against $1.05 1/2 at yesterday's finish. Abnormal scarcity of offers to sell, typical sign of the existence of a market "corner," grew more pronounced as the day drew to an end, with no evidence in sight that trade tension would be relieved until some 15,000,000 bushels of uncompleted September corn contracts had been settled for at big further price jumps or the contracts allowed to be defaulted.

At the close, September corn was at the topmost price level reached, and the corn market as a whole was varying from 1 cent decline to 5 cents advance, September 1.10 1/2, 1.09 1/2, 1.08 1/2, 1.07 Bob Burns Says—

I believe that people who get married in a gossip neighborhood should make a clean breast of everything. By tellin' it first, you beat the gossips.

I had an uncle who moved to a strange town and he fell in love with a local girl and married her in June. They got along just fine until one evening that summer, he came home and he told her that he'd been hearin' a lotta rumors about her past. He says, "it ain't none of my business what you did before I met you, but if only you had told me!" She said, "I was gonna tell you the story of my past but I thought it would be better to save it for the long winter evenings."

75,000 to Hear President at Antietam Fete

Eight Governors to See Re-enactment of Bloody Battle.

By Scott Hart.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 16.—An estimated 75,000 citizens and the Governors of eight States will hear gunfire tomorrow on the Antietam ground near Sharpsburg, where three lost cigars 75 years ago precipitated the bloodiest fighting America ever knew in a single day.

President Roosevelt will be present at ceremonies prior to the sham battle, but will leave after a brief speech.

The firing will be from blank cartridges in modern rifles of 2,500 National Guardsmen and United States Army regulars in a sham battle that is the high light of a historical commemoration of Washington County, Md., history.

The drowsy town of Sharpsburg awoke to the final preparations today, saw hundreds of militia from Maryland, Pennsylvania, the District of Columbia, and Regulars from Fort Belvoir moving for the field where Lee's first invasion of Maryland was stopped 75 years ago. The soldiers walked through a country-side but little changed since the day their fathers saw it. It may even have been more serene yesterday, for the armies of war were on the country-side 75 years ago.

The President, arriving at the field, will be met by 700 soldiers from Belvoir and escorted to the theater of sham action. There will be many bands on the field, some military, some civilian. The City of Hagerstown and Sharpsburg—nearest the battlefield—are in a smother of colors.

President to Speak.

The President is expected to arrive on the field at 12 noon, to speak. The re-enactment of the "Bloody Lane" phase of the widely-fought Antietam fighting begins at 1:30, according to the program. The Governors will come from States as far apart as Maine to Texas, the States that contributed men to the fighting.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Twenty-ninth Division, will direct the movement of the "battle." His headquarters is established now near the snake Antietam Creek that gave its name to the battle, in the Northern references. The Southerners called it Sharpsburg, after the hamlet washed back upon on September 17, 1862.

The soldiers have established a puppet city on the field. Late yesterday they talked of the movement of the fighting, even told how soldiers fall when they're hit by a slug of grape shot or cut by canister.

The officers have been rehearsed in the minute details of the Bloody Lane, and the men tomorrow will follow the commands. They will "hold" and "attack" a sunken road-way that is visible—green and well-kept to this day. Broad fields stretch to the sunken road. Seven years ago men charged on the road and men held the road—for a while. When it was over 4,915 men were on the ground.

Roosevelt to Get Gift.

The President will leave with an indelible memento of the fighting. The people of Sharpsburg will present him a piece of brightly polished wood chopped from a tree near "Burnside's Bridge," another scene of bitter fighting, engaged in by Burnside's corps and a couple of Georgia regiments of infantry. The piece of wood has a bullet imbedded in it.

Meanwhile, Hagerstown—the chief center of the Washington County celebration—is continuing its observance with the historical pageant, "On Wings of Time," as the central piece. Already more than 150,000 persons have viewed it since its beginning on September 4.

"Miss Antietam," queen of the commemoration, with the Governors of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, will be official hosts to the visiting Governors and other distinguished guests.

As for the re-enactment, it will follow these lines: The Confederates will be crouched, waiting, in the sunken road. The Union forces, also, had witnessed half a day of slaughter and now had the assignment of taking the lane. Tomorrow the Union men will charge, shouting to shoulder. In closest formation, against the Confederate line. The Confederates unleash a sheet of fire and the Union people fall back about 200 yards. They will charge again, be forced back again.

Then comes a flanking movement, executed by artillerymen. Posting their guns on an elevation to the eastward they enfilade the gray ranks. The Confederates fall away to a hill at south of the original position.

The blue soldiers spill across the road and move across the field to find engagement again. They retreat and the ensuing engagement concludes the action.

Spectators are to be afforded a sweeping view from the grandstands on the south of the "Bloody Lane." Spectators will have none of the difficulty many people have at the opera, the thing of hearing the singing but not understanding what it is all about. A running narrative will be broadcast through loud-speakers from the high stone tower that overlooks the field.

Wheeler Suggests Roosevelt Pick Board for Black Inquiry

which arose immediately after the announcement of the appointment? "Why the undue haste by the Senate Judiciary Committee and the Senate itself?"

"At least three members of the Senate . . . pleaded with their fellow Senators not to act precipitately."

"Some of the supporters of Senator Black thought they were clever, but they were not. One learns that Senators had received messages from leading Catholics and Jews in Alabama urging the confirmation and declaring that accusations that Black was a member of the Klan were without foundation . . . The messages referred to came from Alabama politicians who are members of the Catholic Church or who had received favors from Black."

"What part did Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic leader and close friend of the President, play in the matter? Only Senator Barkley can answer. Maybe the officials of the Department of Justice can tell us on whose initiative they failed to make an investigation of the charges against Senator Black."

In an address at Kansas City to the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Shipbuilders, Workers and Helpers of America, Keating said, in part, the Associated Press reported: "For 1,000 years my people have been Roman Catholics, or even since St. Patrick came to Ireland. Under the circumstances, I hope that no one will suspect me of undue sympathy for the Ku Klux Klan."

"However, the attack now being made on Justice Hugo L. Black has not impressed me. The attack was launched by a newspaper owned by Paul Black, and Paul Black is the friend and ally of William Randolph Hearst."

"Mr. Black and Mr. Hearst are among the worst enemies of American labor. When men like Black attack Black, they are not attacking him because they believe he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan. They are attacking him because they know he is a progressive."

"It was Senator Black who introduced and championed the first 30-hour bill, and anyone who knows anything about politics knows he took his political life in his hands when he did that."

"It was Senator Black who exposed the thievery of public utility corporations when he conducted the Senate investigation of holding company propaganda."

"And, finally, it was Senator Black who again took his political life in his hands when at the last session of Congress he put through the messages from leading Catholics and Jews in Alabama urging the confirmation and declaring that accusations that Black was a member of the Klan were without foundation . . . The messages referred to came from Alabama politicians who are members of the Catholic Church or who had received favors from Black."

"What part did Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic leader and close friend of the President, play in the matter? Only Senator Barkley can answer. Maybe the officials of the Department of Justice can tell us on whose initiative they failed to make an investigation of the charges against Senator Black."

In an address at Kansas City to the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Shipbuilders, Workers and Helpers of America, Keating said, in part, the Associated Press reported: "For 1,000 years my people have been Roman Catholics, or even since St. Patrick came to Ireland. Under the circumstances, I hope that no one will suspect me of undue sympathy for the Ku Klux Klan."

"Mr. Black and Mr. Hearst are among the worst enemies of American labor. When men like Black attack Black, they are not attacking him because they believe he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan. They are attacking him because they know he is a progressive."

"It was Senator Black who introduced and championed the first 30-retary, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said, in part:

"In view of present revelations in newspaper articles that Senator Black holds life membership in Ku Klux Klan and especially in view of the silence of Senator Black on these widely publicized charges the association urges most emphatically that you, as Chief Executive of the Nation, who nominated Senator Black in good faith and without knowledge of this affiliation, call upon him to resign his post or take other appropriate action, in the absence of repudiation and disproof of the charges by Senator Black, to relieve yourself and the Nation of the embarrassment of having upon the highest court a man pledged to uphold principles inimical to true Americanism . . ."

Repercussions of the Black controversy resulted in an angry denial in Jasper, Ala., by Speaker William B. Bankhead that he is a member of the Klan or had ever been, the Associated Press said.

"I have never been a member of the Klan, and was never asked to be a member," Bankhead said in reply to a suggestion of Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, that such a possibility be investigated.

"I can well understand Mr. Fish's desire to embarrass me if possible. He was offended because I refused to appoint him as a member of the New York World Fair Commission. "Since then Mr. Fish has refused to speak to me, much to my gratification."

Two Senators who previously have been silent during the forensic display regarding Black issued statements yesterday. Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, asserting, "I am confident he will discharge the duties imposed upon him . . . with credit to himself and satisfaction to the American people," and Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, saying "the ideas of the Ku Klux Klan would unquestionably make a man unfit to sit on the Supreme Court, but adding that "I would want to know what his record has been since and what his views are today."

"Much depends on the present viewpoint of a man," he added. In his statement Reynolds said: "Hugo Black, in my opinion, is a gentleman of the highest character . . . I voted for Black's confirmation . . . I would do it all over again, because I know he is honest and able."

A new attempt to bar Black from service on the court, on the ground that his vote on retirement of Supreme Court justices at full pay rendered him ineligible, was made by P. H. Kelly, Boston lawyer, who filed an information with the Supreme Court making an allegation. He also said in the information, the Associated Press reported, that Black cannot serve because there is no vacancy. He asserted Justice Willis Van Devanter's retirement made no vacancy under the Constitution.

Author of a parallel earlier attempt, Albert Levitt, former special assistant to the Attorney General, said in New York, the Associated Press reported, that he will prosecute his effort, despite discovery Black already has taken both oaths required of the justices.

Talks Impeachment. Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, also was quoted from New York by the Associated Press as saying he is sounding out sentiment for impeachment of Black at the request of the New York Journal American, and that he does not contemplate sponsoring action against Black.
